The dining room will be lavishly decorated with Easter lilies, yellow candles and attractive Easter baskets. Lamb's tongues from the woods will also be used.

Covers will be placed for Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Pennington, Mr. and Mrs. George Dewiler, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Evans, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Zeller and daughter, Marilyn, J. O. Mark, Mr. and Mrs. Waldo O. Mills and their children Waldo Jr., and Mary Ellen, and the hosts, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Mills.

Six-Cover Luncheon Honors Guests From Northfield, Minnesota

Mrs. George H. Alden was hostess at a delightful six-cover luncheon on Wednesday honoring her house guests, the Misses Isabella and Minnie Watson of Northfield, Minn.

Covers were placed for the Misses Watson, Miss Edith Denise, Mrs. L. O. Clement, Mrs. Arletta M. Page and the hostess, Mrs. Geo. H. Alden.

The Misses Watson, who were in Carleton college at the time Mrs. Alden was in school, are on their way home after having spent the winter in Santa Barbara, Cal. Miss Denise, who is now a member of the faculty at Willamette university, was at one time dean of women at Carleton college. Mrs. L. O. Clement, who is also a graduate of Carleton college, entertained the visitors with a delightful tea at her home on Thursday.

The Misses Watson left Thursday evening for Portland, where they were guests at a Carleton college banquet at the Congress hotel.

American Legion Auxiliary Benefit Party on Tuesday Promises to Be Big Success

A week of much activity in social circles is promised with the passing of Lent. An outstanding affair will be the bridge benefit on Tuesday afternoon which the American Legion auxiliary will sponsor at the Woman's club house at 461 North Cottage street. Mrs. F. T. White is general chairman of the affair.

Various committees have been named as follows: Supplies, Mrs. Cyril Nason and Mrs. William Watkins; prizes, Mrs. Ernest Thom and dishes, Mrs. Victor MacKenzie; decorations, Mrs. Stanley Ostrander, Mrs. Allan Cleveland, Mrs. Lester Pearline and Mrs. George Naderman; program, Mrs. Frank Zinn; dining room, Mrs. E. A. Paulsen; refreshments, Mrs. Budrow, Mrs. King Bartlett, Mrs. Frank Jirak, Mrs. Lyle Dunsmoor, Mrs. Neisswander, Mrs. Beryl De Gaire, Mrs. John J. Rottle and Mrs. Cyril Richardson.

A group of ten Rainbow girls will serve at the tea hour.

Three prizes will be given—one by Miller's, one by Kafoury's and one by Hartman Bros.

The members are especially asked to bring their card table covers and the accessories for playing bridge.

Among those who have already made reservations are Mrs. A. R. Rankin, Mrs. Laurence Imlah, Mrs. Hucklestein, Mrs. Carl Armstrong, Mrs. U. S. Page, Mrs. E. A. Pruitt, Mrs. James H. Jennings, Mrs. Albert C. Gragg, Mrs. Victor MacKenzie, Mrs. A. M. Johnson, Mrs. R. C. Huxter, Mrs. Ed C. Viesko, Mrs. George R. Vehrs, Mrs. Frederick Lampert, Mrs. R. C. Stevenin, Mrs. Paul Burris, Mrs. Lloyd Demarest, Mrs. Ira Mix of Independence, Mrs. Ernest Thom, Mrs. Bolton Hamble, Mrs. Kenneth Randall, Mrs. E. H. Kennedy and Mrs. Eugene Eckerlin Jr.

Reservations may still be made by calling Mrs. George Nelson at 1511-J, Mrs. Paul Burris at 1487-M or Mrs. H. R. White at 2533-R. An extremely interesting program has been arranged for the afternoon. Miss Nancy Thielsen will sing; Marie Patton will give "cello numbers," and Lyman McDonald will sing.

Proceeds from the affair will go to important welfare work in which the auxiliary is interested.

A new set of questions on Gothic Architecture have been prepared by the art department of the Woman's club in cooperation with the Art History department of Willamette University, and submitted for the information of the interested public as follows:

1. What was the constructional difference between Gothic, and all that came before it?

Ans.: In Romanesque churches, the increase in size was met by thickening of the walls, in order to support the added weight. As these were never very wide, rarely more than twenty feet, this was feasible. But when there came a demand for buildings more than twice the size of any that had been constructed before, builders were not prepared for the task. They were thirty years in solving the mechanical problem.

2. How had churches been ceilinged previous to this demand for greater size?

Ans.: Often the ceilings were open timbered, beautifully decorated, or having semicircular or barrel vaults of stone. Usually the roofs were of wood. When, owing to their inflammability, these were superseded by stone roofs, the increased weight often caused the building to collapse.

3. What characteristic is common to all arches?

Ans.: The weight of stone in the crown, or top of the arch, does not bear down vertically, but pushes outward in its tendency to flatten. Any arch will do this if not supported by side pressure.

4. What is this combination of vertical and horizontal pressure called?

Ans.: The "line of thrust," which sweeps diagonally outward from the top of the arch to the ground below.

5. Does the shape of the arch affect this line?

Ans.: It does. In a pointed arch this reaches the ground nearer the building than in the case with the round arch. The outward thrust is less in the pointed.

6. How was this tendency to spread or flatten the architecture overcome?

Ans.: The greater the weight of material, the greater the tendency to flatten. Such enormous masses of material as were required for such large churches must be supported in some other way. The desire for openings for the use of stained glass also stimulated builders in their efforts.

The device which made possible the ceiling of large spaces is rather simple. Instead of treating the space as a unit it is divided into squares called bays. Crossing each square diagonally, as many times as the width of the square seems to demand, arches of finely cut stone, which divide this square into triangular parts, or small vaults, which are easily filled with fitted stone, since the ribs bear the weight and carry it down, also they reduce the tendency to flatten the arch.

7. How was the outward thrust of these ribs neutralized?

Ans.: Sections of walls were built at right angles to the main wall, and these were called buttresses. They were variously shaped, and carried the thrust from the main wall to a more or less massive pier, some distance clear of the building itself. These, from their wing-like appearance, were called flying buttresses.

8. Were these ornamental or simply utilitarian?

Ans.: While all were attractive some were extremely so. They gave an effect of lightness and aspiration, not easily described, to an otherwise massive wall. In addition, they made possible the many windows, with their stained glass, which so glorified the churches of this time, and which were not possible before the use of ribbed vault and flying buttress because the thickness of wall necessary to support, precluded large openings.

Miss Odile Persons, Bride Elect, Is Honored With Surprise Shower

A group of Royal Neighbors surprised Miss Odile Persons, bride-elect, with a delightful shower on Friday evening at the home of Mrs. Carrie Bunn and Mildred Nash at 2335 Hazel avenue. Story Telling Group Holds Fine Meetings

The story telling section of the Salem Arts league held two very interesting meetings recently. The first was at the home of Miss Rebecca Baker and the second at the home of Mrs. Clifton Mudd.

According to the program which was outlined at the beginning of the year, both lessons for April were on Bible stories. Mrs. Mudd gave a very instructive lesson on "Adapting Stories from Great Sources," and she read at length from Richard G. Moulton, an eminent authority on Bible stories.

Section members contributed stories of "The Creation," "Feeding of Five Thousand," "Origin of Palm Sunday," "Ruth and Naomi," "The Resurrection."

The next meeting of this section will be on May 11. The lesson will be on Poetry. The story telling section will have entire charge of the last open meeting of general arts league.

Joan Newcomb's Easter Frolic Features an Out-of-Door Egg Hunt

Forty boys and girls were invited to participate in the exceedingly delightful Easter frolic of yesterday morning at which Joan Newcomb was hostess at the country home of her mother, Beatrice Crawford Newcomb, on the Dallas road.

The feature of the morning was the out-of-door egg hunt on the wooded hillside. The prize was awarded to Bobby Downs, who succeeded in discovering the largest number of eggs.

Breakfast was served at 12 o'clock in the dining room. The rooms were decorated with wild flowers and fruit blossoms.

Music and games added further to the pleasure of the morning.

Those invited to share in the festivities were Patsy Livesley,
