

HUMANE SOCIETY MANAGER TO SPEAK

Large Meeting Planned for Independence on Friday Afternoon

Mrs. F. W. Swanton, general manager of the Oregon Humane Society will speak in Independence on Friday at 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon in the interest of humane week.

Mrs. Swanton will speak to the school children, the teachers, the Boy Scouts and the Campfire Girls.

Henry Bergh was the founder of the first humane society in America. With the prevention of cruelty to animals as its aim, it became inspired with the human sentiment displayed in the Royal Society of England. The purpose of the British society is to protect the dumb creatures of the country and woods.

Evelyn Rita Greene says in an interesting article published in the Portland Examiner "To suffer is a faculty inseparable from life, whether of man or beast, but it is certain that much suffering endured by dumb creatures comes from the thoughtlessness, greed, and cruelty of man."

P. M. Baldwin is the president of the Oregon society.

A clean footstep on a clean rug would wear but little. It's the deep-embedded grit that cuts and wears. The only way to get that out—all of it—is the new way of the Premier Duplex: motor-driven brush—plus powerful suction. It gets thread and lint, too.

Returns From Eastern Trip

C. P. BISHOP

There is a prominent clothing manufacturer in the city of Rochester, N. Y., who wants to come to Oregon and establish a factory.

The only thing lacking is definite assurance that retail clothiers in the state would cooperate in giving support to the enterprise.

This was stated by C. P. Bishop, proprietor of the Bishop Woolen mills store, who returned Tuesday from the east where he attended primarily the annual convention of the National Association of Retail Clothiers at St. Louis.

The plan would be to establish a manufacturing plant here and ship clothing to the east. That labor conditions in the west are much better than they are in the east is one of the reasons cited for the contemplated factory.

Salem would be an ideal place for such a factory and if the plan is carried out, Mr. Bishop believes local people should get behind the matter and see that the industry is located here.

The tendency in the eastern cities now, with the exception of New York city, is to concentrate factories in any certain section of the city. In Chicago, manufacturing establishments are located in every part of the city. Workers, thus, do not find it necessary to ride long distances on street cars to get to their places of employment.

Mr. Bishop found great prosperity existing throughout the sections east of the Mississippi river. Building operations are being carried out on a phenomenal scale. In Chicago old buildings are being torn down to make way for new ones of greater height and office capacity.

Salem is right in the swing of this building development, said Mr. Bishop, and in proportion to its opportunities and wealth its real estate activity is right on a par with the rest of the cities.

At the convention there was more talk of advertising than anything else. The successful business is the one which can tell the most people about its wares. On a scale of tremendous advertising, one firm in New York city reported a net profit of a million dollars in one year.

While the style models in clothing have not changed much in the east, fabrics have. Everything loud and jazzy is being worn there and the man who can appear decked in the gaudiest pattern apparently is considered the elite in dress.

All the newspapers in the large eastern centers are full of political talk, said Mr. Bishop. Most of the journals in New York city support Al Smith's presidential aspirations strongly.

The conservative element and the big business interests are solidly behind Coolidge, however. Business conditions are good and the present administration gets the credit. Every confidence is shown in the president.

Mr. Bishop's time in the east was spent mostly in Rochester, New York city, St. Louis and Chicago.
