Delegates to County Convention Are Named at Meeting of Woman's Club
An important meeting of the Salem Woman's club was held on Saturday afternoon at the Woman's club house, with Mrs. C. S. Hamilton, the president, presiding.

The chief business of the day was the election of delegates to the county convention which will be held in Woodburn next Friday. Those chosen were Mrs. Hamilton, the president, Mrs. Alice H. Dodd, Mrs. A. L. Wallace, Mrs. Seymour Jones and Mrs. W. F. Fargo.

Interesting announcements were made concerning Better Homes week which is being extensively observed in Salem at this time.
Plans were made for a large tea later in the spring, with bridge as the diversion. The proceeds will go toward the Dohrbacker hospital fund.

The group was pleased to hear that Blanche Reese and Lois Birdwell won first and second places, respectively, in the competition in which papers on architecture were written. Miss Mattie Beatty received the winners. The first prize was $3 in cash and the second, $2.

The speaker of the afternoon was Mrs. Anna Lee Wells of Hillsboro, who spoke on "Our School." It is her opinion that women should be represented on the board of a city school system.

Pupils of Joy Turner Moses gave the special music of the afternoon. Fernie Tweedie Davenport played a piano solo, "Paraphrase of Concert," "My Old Kentucky Home," and a group of three violinists, Margaret Eddy, Marjorie Wunder and Glenna Hiltibrand, with Joy Turner Moses at the piano, played "The Dancing Master," (Severn).

The April tea was an enjoyable event of the afternoon. Mrs. Chas. H. Robertson and Mrs. H. J. Clements presided at the urns.

Interesting Survey of Jazz Is Given
Bach is called the "father of jazz" by Frederick Miller, the British basso, in an article published by the American Monthly.
"Bach of jazz is a long line of ancestors, beginning with the folk songs of primitive peoples," says Mr. Miller. "Sebastian Bach is the most outstanding of the old masters who in their lighter moods turned to jazz expressions. He consistently used the syncopated methods of the modern writer. Students readily recognize these movements in a great deal of his work, and even to the novice it should be apparent in such pieces as the prelude to his St. Anne's Fugue, certain passages of which are carried away with syncopation."
"Old Father Bach must have been in a hilarious mood much of his time, for so often the essential jazz spirit creeps out, with its lifting, swaying, devil-may-care abandon.

"Nor was Bach alone in his employment of syncopation. In the duet between Adam and Eve in Haydn's Creation is an excellent example. Give it into the hands of one of our modern composers with instructions to dress it up for the saxophone, traps and trombone, and a perfect piece of flamboyant jazz will result.

"Beethoven's Sonata in A-flat with variations contains another convincing specimen of the earlier writing of essential jazz. The third variation of the first part has the very swing and beat which has been attributed exclusively to this modern version of music.

"There are thousands of examples of works in which the old composers turned to syncopation when in facetious humor. Adapt any of them to the modern jazz orchestra and few could differentiate its form from the latest syncopated hit on Broadway.

"All this came about through a deliberate transition. From the primitive to the classic was a tedious development, and there were many faltering steps upon the road from the folk song to the Wagnerian opera and the Beethoven sonata. Through all these upward steps, the essential jazz movement made itself felt and was written into the music of the world.

"In the jazz craze of the present day, America is going through a similar transition. The same trend is apparent, upward from the old folk song to the highest in music, and through the jazz era we shall come to something unquestionably American in music.

"The effect of the present stage will be felt not only by the composers, but by every American who has a soul for music. For jazz in any form is disturbing. It stirs the emotions, sets some rhythm going within, so that a craving is the one logical result. In time the individual becomes fed up on the flamboyant jazz, and once surfeited he can be satisfied only by something of a more exalted tone. Jazz is an intermediary movement toward higher orders of music."

Salem Public Is Invited to Inspect Model Homes This Afternoon and Evening
