Survey Man Here— Elmer Griepentrog, a representative of the U. S. biological survey, has completed one year of bird banding work. He has banded 172 birds of 22 species. He uses a small aluminum band with a number impressed upon it. If banded birds are found dead, or if they are killed during lawful open game season, the numbers should be sent to the bureau of biological survey, department of agriculture, Washington, D. C., with a notation telling where the bird was found. These returns reaching the department link up information about bird habits that are scientifically valuable. Griepentrog is also checking on pest suppression by birds.

Acres of Dugouts Seen by Multnomah Deputies PORTLAND, April 26.—(AP.)—"An acre full of dugouts" is the description applied to the premises of W. S. Alderson by deputy sheriffs who yesterday arrested Alderson on charges of possessing liquor.

Three hundred gallons of wine were found in one dugout, officers reported. In another dugout the deputies found a copper tank containing 25 gallons of beer ready to bottle. A 450-foot gas line ran from the house to a shack over this dugout. In another shack the officers found several hundred flasks and bottles and in a third dugout they located a 50-gallon barrel of wine.

Alderson, the officers said, was found in a pit in one of the dugouts drawing off some wine.
