

Thrills and Laughs Feature "Smokeless Smoker" Held at High School

BOXING, WRESTLING BOUTS PLEASE ALL

Twenty-one leather pushers and six knights of the skinned elbow pushed, slammed and bowed their way through more than two hours of activity at the 1927 high school meet in the gymnasium last night.

Approximately 500 students and other sport fans had filled the gym when the wrestling matches were called.

Merrel Amort and Robert Holliday, 158 pounders, threw each other twice in five minutes and were given a draw.

Albert Lyons and Bernard Temple, middleweights, each won a bout but Temple stayed behind enough to earn a decision.

Harry Nelson, light heavyweight, threw Lee Tate in 1:42 and outwrestled him to gain a decision in the final event on the mat.

John Evans, 135 pounds, scored a technical K. O. over Harold Massey in the second round of their bout. Massey had the honor of receiving the first bloody nose of the evening.

Clifford Lingenfelter outpointed Sam Berger in a every round and took a handy decision. Both scrappers weighed in as featherweights.

Bill Bowne and Bob Kelly staged a battling, slugger bee which brought the crowd to its feet. Bowne used his long range to good effect, but failed to outscrap his opponent. Both boys weighed 162 pounds.

Hal Lehman lost on a foul in the second round to his heavier opponent, Keltan Butler, when the latter stopped on the button and went down for the count. Lehman wanted to put the matter beyond question so piled on while opposition was down.

The best three-round bout on the card was that between Charlie Morrey and Art Andresen, welterweights. Morrey opened up with a great fanning of open gloves, taking everything Art could give him. He came back, however, and had Andresen groggy in the same round. In the second canto he used too much saliva on the mitts and was warned by the referee. Morrey turned his deaf ear to the referee and came through the final round to earn a draw.

Doc Woods' flying mitts were too interesting for Winnie Glese. Smiling Winnie laughed under a heavy shower in the second and took to the ringside where he saved his complexion from further damage.

"Famous" Bob Drager, all state basketball stalwart, took several mighty salvos from the mitts of Casey Kelley, home run king. Drager spent the entire four rounds in graceful retreats and pleasant settees on the ropes. It was all Kelley's fight.

The old and ancient belief that feminine fans deplore the sight of blood went into the discard in the semi-final dirge of gore between Joel Dalby and Francis Peyton. A severed vein in Dalby's nose poured a steady stream in the first round, but the girls rooted for Peyton all the same. Peyton frothed through the second and third rounds, wanting many chances, and was unable to hold Dalby off in the fourth, the latter taking a close shade.

The main event between Laron Watts and Doyle Carter, lightweights, was the fiercest struggle of the card. Watts started pulling his punches in the third round and let Carter ease through to the finish. Watts was in better shape and a more experienced scrapper, allowing him an easy decision.

The final and most thrilling rib-tickler on the program was the battle royale between three blindfolded class representatives, Ivan Kafoury, senior; Fred Smith, junior; and Homer Smith, sophomore. Kafoury slapped many imaginary opponents but failed to connect. Following the directions of feminine admirers he walked straight to a wall from sophomore Smith and went through the ropes for the first out.

Fred Smith went down in another minute and the sophomore brave took the match.

PLANS COMPLETED FOR RACING MEET

At a meeting held in Portland last night, officers of the Northwestern Auto Racing Association conferred with drivers who are entered in the race program here May 7, or their representatives, selected officials for the race meet and made other final arrangements.

The program for the big day on the track, as outlined at present will open with time trials for place positions and for classification. Cars will be entered in the later races according to their speed as shown in these trials, so that cars of similar speed will be pitted against each other.

Next comes the six mile motorcycle race, in which will be entered eight of the northwest's best riders; a ten mile race for class B cars; a ten mile race for class A cars; then the spectacular feature of an airplane racing the fastest motorcycle and one of the fastest racing cars for three miles.

The final event will be the feature race of the day, the free for all of 25 miles in which all cars will be allowed to enter, ending one of the snappiest programs ever put on at the state fairgrounds race track.

Bill Dozier, who has finished in the money at all of the major events in the northwest in recent years, has wired that his car is in perfect shape and that he will bring it to Salem next week to tune it up and give it whatever finishing touches it may need after the tryouts.

Howard Willis, who raced on the fairgrounds track last season, left for the midwest soon after the last date here and raced in nine events getting seven first and two second places. This is a remarkable record considering that he was pitted against some of the best drivers in the middle west. Willis also will be here May 7.

Four motorcycle racers who will compete here May 7, taking a curve. They are Paul Remaley, Otto Bohlman, Ray Tauscher, Cody Evans and Yale Smith.
