Arbitration Effort For Plumbers Fails

25 Union Workers Idle When Demand for More Pay Denied

Arbitration attempted between master plumbers and members of the plumbers union failed last night and the demand for a $10 day continues today with approximately 25 union workers away from work. The demand represents an increase of $2 per day with better working hours.

The local union of sheet metal workers advised reporters last night that as yet they had made no demands for higher wages as previously stated from $8 to $9.50 per day. The only implication of their urge for such a wage was through a letter sent to master sheet metal workers April 12, asking for a conference on comparative wages. The date was set for Monday, May 2, but the scheduled meet was not held last night due to the failure of both parties to attend.

The following letter shows the attitude of their union:

April 12, 1927.
To the Master Sheet Metal Workers of Salem.

The members of this local have recently appointed a committee from our organization to confer with you relative to an increase in the wage scale in our district.

It may perhaps be news to some of you that at a recent conference between the employer and employee in Portland, an agreement was reached whereby the wages were to be $9.50 per day effective September 1, 1927, and a five day working week effective May 1, 1927.

You can readily see the necessity of our keeping in line with this movement if we wish to furnish competent help when needed.

You must also appreciate the spirit of our asking for this conference in place of the usual demands as it is our desire to work in harmony in conjunction with the employer to our mutual benefit.

Any evening of the week excepting Tuesday, Wednesday or Friday will be accepted.

Kindly advise us the date acceptable.

Yours respectfully,

R. A. Fraser, secretary.

city's buildings, particularly new apartment houses. This communication was referred to the city engineer with instructions to see that the ordinance governing this point was enforced. The other stated that Hansen and Liljequist, a lumber firm, were not living up to the terms of their building permit. This communication was tabled. Mayor Liversley saying that many other firms in that vicinity were crossing the sidewalk on East Church street without censure. There was no objection on the part of residents there at the privileges taken by the lumber firm.

A petition from the White Sewing Machine, the Tailman Music company, and W. E. (Dun) Burns asking a parking restriction on South High between Ferry and Trade was referred to the ordinance committee.

Ordinance No. 2455 directed against speakers who used the public streets for lengths of time greater than 15 minutes came up for final passage, but because of the absence of Councilman John final action was delayed until next meeting.

The streets committee also reported favorably on paving Oxford street between Church and Cottage; Trade between 14th and 17th; Cottage between Oxford and Rural; E street between Oaks addition and Cottage. The committee's recommendation was adopted.

A petition from the Associated Oil company, for permission to remove the spur track now on Oak between 19th and 20th, and to construct a new one on that street was granted.

Howard-Cooper corporations bid on an air hammer, paving breaker and other tools was accepted.

T. L. Billingsley, of the Southern Pacific company, appeared before the council and secured permission to operate buses between Marion and Market over North Winter instead of North Summer. Until Summer street is repaired. Several breakdowns have occurred because of poor condition of Summer, he said.

A letter from Jas. G. Heltzel, local attorney, representing A. N. Bush, called attention to the fact that the Bush estate had been assessed for street improvement on Mission street in front of Bush's pasture, which he said was to be assumed by the city under an old agreement. The matter was referred to the city attorney.

STICKS TO THIRD STORY

Mrs. Snyder Denies Any Part in Her Husband's Murder

NEW YORK, May 2.—(AP.)—After more than five hours of cross examination by two attorneys, Mrs. Ruth Brown Snyder was still on the witness stand protesting the truth of her third version of the murder of her husband when court recessed today.

The blonde widow of Albert Snyder, magazine art editor, slain in his Queens Village home March 20, broke into tears once and several times flashed angry answers back to her questioners, but throughout the day of grilling she clung to her story that Henry Judd Gray, her sorcerer salesman partner, plotted to kill and did murder her husband without her aid and against her wishes.

Norway Goes Wet Again; No Disorder First Day

OLSO, Norway, May 2.—(AP.)—Norway's change from dry to wet came into operation here quietly today when the sale of liquor in bottles began. Thirteen stores were open at 11 o'clock in the morning and numerous customers stood in line waiting to put into effect their new found liberty.

Though police were there to keep order and prevent crowding they found their task an easy one for the customers were served quickly and quickly disappeared when they had received their supplies.

Brandy and whiskey were most in demand.

The only restriction is as to the age of the purchaser, the age limit being fixed at 21, and any amount can be bought and paid for until five o'clock in the afternoon.

PRUN-PORT SYRUP MACHINE ARRIVES

Installed at Portland Plant of Major Fruit Products Company for Time

The Major Fruit Products Co., manufacturers of Prun-Port and Prun-Port concentrate syrup, in which a great many Salem people are interested, has completed the installation of the equipment for the manufacture of syrup and it is now in operation.

This equipment has been installed temporarily in the company's bottling plant at 43rd and Division streets, Portland, pending the opening of a plant for the manufacture of the concentrate syrup only, in Salem. The equipment now in operation has a maximum capacity of 300 gallons of syrup each 24 hours. This quantity will produce approximately 5800 cases of Prun-Port of 24 bottles each. The bottling plant is equipped to turn out 300 cases per day for the Portland plant.

An advertising campaign through the medium of the newspapers and radio is about to be inaugurated to introduce Prun-Port to the Pacific coast. This will be gradually broadened until national distribution has been attained.

Oregon's own beverage, which has no superior, will eventually be consumed in every state in the union. A great deal of credit is due the citizens of Salem who have supported the enterprise in a great many ways.

It is expected that a vast new market for dried prunes will be developed by this enterprise which is of especial interest to this valley.

Distribution of Prun-Port for the Salem territory is being maintained by the Star Bottling Works of Salem.

Fish Hatchery Employees to Get January Salaries

PORTLAND, May 2.—(AP.)—Employees of fish hatcheries in district No. 2, the coast district, of the Oregon state fish commission, will be paid their January salaries this week. This was decided by the fish commission at an all day meeting here today. Routine business was discussed.

The payroll, amounting to about $3,000 for approximately 20 hatchery men, will be placed in an Astoria bank and issued to the employees. Payment of salaries for February, March and April work will be made as soon as funds are available.

Funds for this payroll will be derived from the sale of not more than 4,000,000 steel head salmon eggs by district No. 2 to district No. 1 for a total of approximately $10,000 and from the equal division between the two districts of trolling poundage tax incomes.

was the subject of an address given by R. H. Chapter of the Western Forestry and Conservation association. T. M. Talbot of the United States forest service discussed incendiarianism, while logging camp protection was the subject of an address by C. C. Scott, secretary of the fire patrols association.

Other speakers at today's sessions included George W. Peavy of the Oregon state board of forestry, John H. Guthrie of the United States forestry service and Lynn F. Cronemiller, deputy state forester. A pump demonstration followed the afternoon meeting.

The round-table discussions were in charge of J. W. Ferguson, district warden for Clackamas and Marion counties and Leo M. Martin, district warden of Lincoln county.

The banquet which was held Monday night was informal and was featured by musical numbers and brief addresses.

Today's sessions, instructive to wardens and inspectors, administration of the patrol law, and fixing the responsibility of fires and any other questions dealing with fire patrol operations.

the inhabitants to points of safety. "These refugees are being fed, sheltered and clothed by the American Red Cross, acting as the agent of the American people. The burdens of their care will continue for many more weeks.

"Because of the vast increase in the flooded area, the sum already called for will prove insufficient. The numbers to be cared for have been doubled since that call and the crest of the flood has not reached all parts.

"In order that these thousands of your homeless fellow citizens may continue to receive necessary care, a minimum of $10,000,000 will be needed, and it is therefore desired that the quotas originally assigned as a minimum to the various communities should be doubled.

"As president of the United States and as president of the American Red Cross, I am therefore urging our people to give promptly and most generously so that sufficient funds may be received to alleviate the suffering among so many thousands.

"For the purpose of co-ordination and effectiveness in the administration of the relief funds I recommend that all contributions be forwarded to the nearest local Red Cross chapter or to the American National Red Cross headquarters offices at Washington, St. Louis or San Francisco.

men admitting they were school boy friends of Johnson and were acquainted with his family, but denying that they were in any way biased against DeAutremont, charged with his death.

Attorneys for the state have intimated that they want no women on the jury, believing that the youth of the defendant and the spectacle of his mother attending the trial will render it difficult to render a verdict unwayed by maternal instinct. Both women denied today they would be influenced in any way by their emotions; but the court attaches are generally agreed that the DeAutremont jury will have no women on it, if the state can prevent it.

From the day's questioning of prospective jurors, both the state and the defense made their respective cases evident. State attorneys admitted their evidence against DeAutremont is entirely circumstantial, but they also clearly indicated that they consider this circumstantial evidence exceptionally strong.

Courtroom Crowded

The first day of the trial was without particular incident. In spite of the tedious questioning of jurors on identical lines hour after hour, a crowd of men, women, children and at least two audible babies, remained in the room throughout the day. Many stood in the aisle near the entrance until adjournment.

Hugh DeAutremont, frequently pictured as a debonaire young man, the essence of buoyant health and aggressive jauntness, gave no indication of such an attitude today. Throughout the session he sat slumped down in his chair with a heavy overcoat over his knees and one arm around his mother's chair beside him.

Hugh Looks Worried

Although Hugh's appearance indicated he was indisposed, he denied that he felt ill. During the morning he wore a heavy overcoat, and his mother also was wrapped in a fur collared coat. The facial resemblance between mother and son, as they sat together behind DeAutremont's counsel, was remarked on by the spectators.

During most of the session the young man kept his eyes cast down while he toyed distractedly with a rubber band. Now and then he looked up to glance at
