SAM MOORE TRUE APOSTLE OF SOIL

His Home Paper Tells Only a Part of the True and Creditable Story

(The following editorial article from the Benton County Independent, Corvallis, tells only a part of the story concerning the efforts of Sam H. Moore, president of the Oregon state lime board, in behalf of the farmers of the Willamette valley and coast counties with soil needing lime—and nearly all of it does, or will. Mr. Moore and his son own and operate the Oregon-Corvallis hatchery, with the largest capacity in the state. "A True Apostle of the Soil" is the heading of the article from the Corvallis paper, as follows:)

"If it were possible to measure thinkers by their stature, you would see here and there individuals towering far above their fellows. There have been many such, and circumstances and brain power keep creating more of them and their thinking force drives them forever onward. Burbank was one such, Campbell another, and every particular vocation has produced them.

"We have them here and there, in our midst, inconspicuous by their modesty, but looking at what has been accomplished through their untiring thinking, their memory is worth preservation and their deeds appreciated. A few years ago a family by the name of Moore came to Corvallis and settled in the sour, acid land north of Corvallis. The land would not produce, something was wrong, and Mr. Moore and his wife set about the problem of finding and correcting the difficulty. They were not the kind to pick up and move to another location. If something was wrong, the thing to do was to fix it if it were possible. Then began a long struggle of weary years of experimenting with this and that and at last it was found that all the land needed was to make it sweet and the cheapest and best thing was simply—LIME.

"For the past 15 years LIME and SAM MOORE have been one and the same thing, so far as that family is concerned. That is, every spare moment he has given his time and thought to making farming profitable in Oregon, particularly as it applies to low sour soil. Lime is the one and only antidote. He impounded the legislature, he lectured, he argued and all but fought to get his ideas adopted. And the state lime plant at Salem, now functioning efficiently, is a monument to his everlasting perseverance.

"If anyone is entitled to a monument, for winning a great fight almost single handed, that man is Sam Moore of Corvallis. Look at his hatchery. Here is another monument to a single idea, followed like a hound on a fox track year in and year out. He began on nothing but the idea in his brain. The idea pushed him on—is pushing him today. He is a builder of one thing at a time, but he builds for time and stability. His plant is today one, and perhaps the largest of its kind in the United States.

"Our hats are off to you Sam Moore."

Good Looking Shoes That Are Comfortable

As Nature Made Your Feet

NATURE made feet flexible. Average shoes take the spring from natural feet with hard, unyielding arches. Try bending yours, and you'll see. Cantilevers are flexible from toe to heel—fit the undercurve of the arch—give support without constraint—retain or restore foot-health—and make you like to walk.
