A YELLOW PANSY

To the wall of the old green garden
A butterfly quivering came;
His wings at the sombre lichens
Played like a yellow flame.

He looked at the gray geraniums,
And the sleepy four-o'clocks;
He looked at the low lanes bordered
With the glossy-growing box.

He longed for the peace and the silence,
And the shadows that lengthened there,
And his wee wild heart was weary
Of skimming the endless air.

And now in the old green garden,—
I know not how it came,—
A single pansy is blooming,
Bright as a yellow flame.

And whenever a gay gust passes,
It quivers as if with pain,
For the butterfly soul that is in it
Longs for the winds again.

Col. Hofer Receives Word From Salem Banker

Col. E. Hofer is the recipient of the following communication from Daniel J. Fry, president of the First National Bank, who, with Mrs. Fry, is on a trip around the world:

Bombay, India.
April 22, 1927.
Dear Col. Hofer: India women wear fewer clothes than in U. S. A. Hot days but cool nights. Bombay big commercial city, population one and a half million. Two crops if grain a year, principally exports cotton, grain and rice. Harvesting all hand work, threshing same as in Biblical times and lots of labor and very cheap. Beggars galore but no evidence of starvation.

Kind regards,
DAN'L J. FRY.
