

NORMAL WILL HOLD SUMMER SESSION

Landers Announces 6 and 12 Weeks Plan; Big Enrollment Expected

OREGON NORMAL SCHOOL, Monmouth, Ore., June 11.—(Special.)—Monmouth—the seat of the senior normal school of Oregon—is centrally located in the Willamette valley and offers ideal facilities for students to combine a profitable summer course in teacher-training work at the normal with an enjoyable vacation. Plans for the summer session of the normal have just been released by President Landers, and show that they have been designed to meet a very wide range of professional and cultural needs. Practically every modern phase of teacher-training work is stressed. Special courses have been arranged for the experienced teachers and those coming with advanced credit.

The regular summer quarter will cover a period of 12 weeks and will begin June 20 and continue through September 2. However, the term is divided so that those wishing to attend that six weeks may be so accommodated—the first half closing July 27.

The attendance promises to be even larger than that of last summer, and indications are that a large majority of the enrollment will include teachers of experience and many out-of-state people, who are attracted not only by the high type of work and special courses being offered, but also by the scenic surroundings, mild climate, and central location of Monmouth to many of the large cities of Oregon.

The practice school will be the largest ever held under the auspices of the normal training department, and according to director of this department, Thos. H. Gentle, approximately 200 students will be given practice work for six weeks in the branch training schools at Corvallis, Salem, Independence and Monmouth.

Aside from the regular faculty roll many additional instructors will assist with the large summer classes. Five Portland teachers who are specialists and who have accepted posts with the normal school for the summer session are Mrs. Claire Grout, Grace Bridges, Julia Spooner, Pearl Ellis and Grace McKenzie. Superintendent Geo. Hug of Salem will again offer educational courses.

Teachers interested in the platoon system will be offered a special course in socialized auditorium activities under Edna Mingus, a course which is not being offered elsewhere this summer.

Among the elective English courses one in the study of Shakespeare is being offered.

A course in pre-primary education will be offered by Emma Henkle, who has specialized in this work in the practice school at Columbia university, and who has spent much time studying the pre-primary schools in San Francisco and southern California schools. The pre-primary schools in these southern institutions are now a success and have proved to be a practical solution to the problem of introducing correct physical habits and high moral standards to the pre-school child.

HONOR ROLL PUPILS IN CITY TOTAL 803

Health Habits Emphasized in Salem Schools; Parents Get Reports

Honor roll students in the Salem schools this last year numbered 803 students, all of whom practice health habits daily, have had defects corrected, were satisfactory in conduct, and passed all their school work with an average of not lower than B, according to Anna Simpson, supervisor of health education in the city schools.

Nearly every grade teacher in Salem has emphasized the health program and has given class room instruction in it. Much work is being done in the correlation of health with other subjects.

Every six weeks during the year a health report has been given to each child, to be taken home, so that parents may see the progress being made. Weights and measurements of the children are included in these reports.

Health instruction at McKinley has been given to every pupil. At Parrish this instruction has been given only to the girls this year, but will probably be given to both boys and girls next year. In the high school more correlation is needed between the health work and that of the other departments. A start has been made this year in that direction.

Articles published this year by Salem teachers include the following: "The Supervised Lunch," by Mabel Murray, principal of the Highland school, published in the Oregon Educational Journal; "Nutrition Program in the Elementary Schools," by Lyle Murray, principal of Englewood school; "A First Grade Silent Reading Project," by Mrs. Sadie Grant, Englewood teacher; and "A First Grade Health Project," by Bennie Hamner, Englewood teacher. The last three were all published in the Oregon Teachers' Monthly.

A definite course of study in health education, closer attention to ventilation needs of buildings, better health equipment and more coordination of work in the high school, are recommended by Miss Simpson as forward steps which should be taken next year in the Salem schools.

FOREIGN MISSIONS OCCUPY FRIENDS

John R. Cary, National Officer, Addresses Session on Evangelism

NEWBERG, Ore., June 11.—(Special.)—The annual report of the board of foreign missions of Oregon yearly meeting was presented at the morning session yesterday by J. Harlan Smith, head of the board, and this was followed by a missionary play depicting the contrast between life in Oregon and life in Africa where Oregon's foreign mission work is carried on. Following the play, Prof. Clarence G. McClean of Pacific college gave a stirring and impressive missionary address.

The foreign mission budget of $2640 was materially exceeded this year. The recommendation for next year is to be presented at a later session.

The afternoon session was devoted to the work of the evangelistic and church extension board, presented by Oliver Wessner, chairman.

One of the most interesting features of the work of this board has been the work among the Indians on the Klamath reservation, the headquarters of this work being at Sprague River. The evangelistic and church extension board suggested the turning over of this work to the board on home missions and social service, but it was felt that the work should remain under its present control during the coming year, with the possibility of its transfer to the home mission board a year hence.

The second and closing session of the meeting on ministry and oversight was held Friday morning. Mrs. Myrtle Tussell of Middleton was again chosen as presiding clerk and Mrs. Edna Lull of Salem as recording clerk.

John R. Cary, presiding officer of Baltimore Yearly meeting and also of the five years meeting of Friends in America, gave a very helpful address on the function of the meeting on ministry and oversight in the work of evangelism.

The forenoon session today will be devoted to the department of peace, and in the afternoon to the work of the education department with the annual report of Pacific college. The Christian Endeavor yearly meeting rally will occur tonight.

"BACHELERS" WELL PAID

CHICAGO (AP)—Girl stenographers and department store clerks may disdain the employment of the "bachelor" but the waitresses make more money than their sisters at desks or behind counters.

Kings and Queens Become Collectors for Stamps

LONDON.—(AP)—Royal stamp collectors exchange specimens among themselves just like ordinary persons.

King George has one of the finest collections in Europe. Other enthusiastic royal philatelists include the Queen of the Belgians and the Queen of Italy.

When Queen Elizabeth was here recently with King Albert she spent some time looking over King George's stamp albums at Buckingham Palace. The King's collection is considered by experts to be an exceptional one, containing many specimens bought with the money "saved up" for the purpose when he was a boy and was given pennies to do with as he pleased.

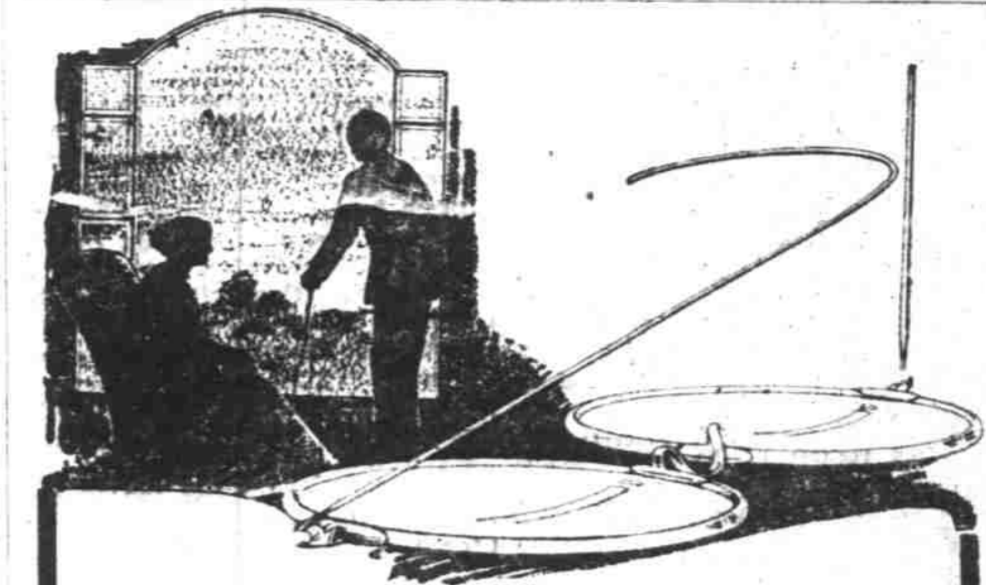

King George presented the Belgian queen with several specimens which she required to fill out a set. Not long ago Queen Elizabeth assembled as complete a set as possible of Belgian stamps and sent them to the other queen collector in Rome, and in turn the Queen of Italy sent the Belgian queen several varieties which she did not have in her albums.

Prosaic Cabbies Use Arch Kept for Kings

LONDON.—(AP)—Taxicabs are being allowed to pass in and out of Hyde Park through the Wellington Arch, by special permission of King George, while the road through the gate ordinarily used is under repair. The rigid rule that the Wellington Arch must be kept for Royal use was temporarily relaxed in the interests of efficiency.

Other London arches that are for Royal use only are the Marble Arch and the central arch of Admiralty Gate. The Horse Guards Arch in Whitehall is available for cabinet ministers, members of the Army Council, and other state dignitaries.
