

THE OREGON STATESMAN

Published Daily Except Monday by THE STATESMAN PUBLISHING COMPANY 215 South Commercial Street, Salem, Oregon

Wherefore take unto you the whole armour of God, that ye may be able to withstand in the evil day, and having done all, to stand. Ephesians 6:13.

THE EIGHT AMENDMENTS

There are eight proposed amendments to the Salem city charter, to be voted on at the election of next Tuesday. They are as follows: To remove three years residence qualification to hold office. To allow council to assess sidewalk costs to abutting property. For 2 mill tax for fire fighting apparatus. For 2 mill tax for repairing bridges, streets, alleys, etc. For $40,000 bonds for incinerator. For $500,000 bonds for sanitary and drainage system. For $350,000 bonds for construction and reconstruction of permanent bridges. For voting Kay's addition into city limits. The first amendment should of course pass. If we are to have an efficient city administration, with experts in charge of the various departments, we must remove the three year residence disability. And of course the second one should pass. The city council should have this authority, and it should be expressed in words about which there can be no dispute as to their meaning. That is what this proposed amendment undertakes to do. And the third, too, ought to be adopted. We need more and better fire fighting apparatus, distributed more evenly over the city. Salem is growing and will keep on growing. The 2 mill tax for repairing bridges, streets, alleys, etc., is a measure that is needed for the same reason. The $40,000 bond issue for an incinerator ought to have every one's vote. That is the only way to get rid of the dump. It cannot be removed. And it is a growing menace. We will have to provide the $500,000 for a sanitary and drainage system; to take care of the city's sewage without emptying it into the Willamette river. We will not be allowed to do this for long. A disposition system can be made self supporting, under scientific handling. The $350,000 for new bridges is needed. And the Kay addition ought to be voted into the city. More territory ought to be voted in. For we are to have a census in 1930, and we will get credit only for what population we have within the city limits. We have what is termed by the census men a "metropolitan district" that contains now about 30,000 people, including territory to the north, south and east that really belongs to the city, and including West Salem, which we should also find a way to include. But we need also, to carry out the ambitious program outlined, a commission (corporation) form of city government, with trained men and experts in charge of the various departments, under a mayor (like a corporation president) to direct them, and a city council to confirm appointments and pass ordinances. All this we need, and we need it all together. And still more. We need municipal ownership of the city water works, and finally a gravity system furnishing both mountain water and power for our industries.

SISKIYOU SLAYERS "DRESS IN" AT PEN

to Portland and purchased an automobile that figured in the evidence at Hugh's trial. The brothers first planned to hold up a bank but could not find one from which they could plan an easy escape. Unable to find a bank to rob the brothers decided to hold up a train, and then began the preparations for the Siskiyou affair. They drove to the mountains in southern Oregon and after studying train movements for three days decided to hold up the Shasta train No. 13. Hugh then drove the car back to Eugene, where he left it at the home of his father. Move to Cabin. The brothers remained at a camp in the Siskiyou until a day or two before the holdup when they moved to a cabin at Mount Crest. First burning all the equipment they could, and fixing and creating footpaths. "The night before we got all ready," said Hugh, "all of us were undecided, but each was afraid to back out because he feared the others would say he had cold feet." About noon Roy and Hugh went to the north end of the tunnel and waited for the train. Ray was at the detonator. "When the train came along we ran for the blind baggage," said Hugh. "I got on, but Roy dropped his gun. He nearly missed the train. I held out my hand and helped him on." The brothers crawled over the tender and down into the cab. As soon as the engine stopped they prepared to blow the mail car, but the mail clerk locked the door and refused to come out. After three warnings a dynamite detonator was exploded, wrecking the car. Hugh in the meantime had marched the engineer and fireman to the detonator, which was set off by Ray. After the explosion the brothers took the fireman and engineer back to the train. The tunnel was full of smoke. They saw a man coming with a fuse. Ray fired at him with a shotgun and he fell. Shot Through Shoulder. "We did not shoot him in the back as the doctor said," declared Hugh. "The bullet, with him staggering, went up through his shoulder." Hugh said he forced the engineer to get back into the cab to draw the train from the smoky tunnel and when the engineer "fooled around" and failed to start the engine Hugh got mad and shot him. "They Roy shot the fireman," said Hugh. The brothers then ran back into the woods where they had a secret cache. Ray left the two brothers there, but returned later when he discovered they were being sought in connection with the crime. In their flight toward the coast an airplane searching for them passed close to them while they hid beneath a tree. Hungry they came near giving up, but continued their flight until they reached a logging camp near Hill, Cal., where Hugh stole some beef. Roy foraged some biscuits and other food. They then went to Hornbrook, passing many special agents. They reached the Klamath river, where Roy speared some salmon. It was there that they parted, deciding to meet on New Year's day at Santa Ana, Texas. Hugh took the name of James C. Price; Ray that of William Elliott and Roy was to be known as Ed. Anderson. Hugh went to Los Angeles and to Long Beach, then to Mexico. He saw the pictures of the brothers, and went back to Mexicali. Then he went to El Paso and later to Arkansas. He kept his trust in Santa Ana but found no mail there for him or his brothers. Then he went to Missouri and finally to Chicago where he joined the army, later going to the Philippines where he was captured. Believes Roy Innocent. IRONTON, Ohio, June 23.—(AP)—Despite the fact that her husband, Roy D'Autremont, conducted the cost of improving Broadway Street from Norway Street to Madison Street. Bits For Breakfast. The curtain rings down— The closing chapters are being written— And the three D'Autremonts will pass from the front pages of the newspapers for good and all. There is a democracy that is as it should be in the service upon which they enter now. They will each be known by a number, and they will receive the treatment their behavior may merit. As Napoleon said, "no man is a hero to his own valet," there are no heroes in the ranks of servitude in a well regulated prison. They will be "fish" for a few days only, and then they will pass to the democratic ranks where conduct only will and of right ought to count. The secret service man who directed the D'Autremont search over the wide world for going on four years should have a vacation. He earned it. He will know the address of these men from now on. He never doubted their guilt, nor their final capture. That was his exclusive job. The G. A. R. of Oregon demands strict law enforcement. These men ought to be entitled to speak on this subject. "What did you say to Miss Antique to make her so angry?" "Why, nothing. She asked me if I didn't think this age terrible and I merely inquired how it compared, in her experience, with previous ages."—The Pathfinder.

Delegates to the national encampment were: Rosetta Buchanan, delegate at large; Almira Underwood, Annie Guild, Martha Drake, Hattie St. Clair, delegates and Adena Blackburn, Hattie Gray, Maude Leeper and Callie Miller, alternates. A band concert by the Salem Cherrians was given last night at the armory in honor of the departing convention visitors, and the Salem Boys' Chorus sang to a capacity audience.

As Napoleon said, "no man is a hero to his own valet," there are no heroes in the ranks of servitude in a well regulated prison. They will be "fish" for a few days only, and then they will pass to the democratic ranks where conduct only will and of right ought to count. The secret service man who directed the D'Autremont search over the wide world for going on four years should have a vacation. He earned it. He will know the address of these men from now on. He never doubted their guilt, nor their final capture. That was his exclusive job. The G. A. R. of Oregon demands strict law enforcement. These men ought to be entitled to speak on this subject. "What did you say to Miss Antique to make her so angry?" "Why, nothing. She asked me if I didn't think this age terrible and I merely inquired how it compared, in her experience, with previous ages."—The Pathfinder.

Insurance Association Denied Oregon License. A license to operate in the state of Oregon for the year 1927 has been refused the Mutual Benefit Health & Accident association by Clare A. Lee, state insurance commissioner. The license was denied on the ground that it is not a stock company and that the laws of Oregon do not permit a company of that nature to operate in the state without a capital stock of at least $200,000 and a surplus of $100,000.

LILLAGAR TELLS STORY OF CIVIL WAR CAREER. (Continued from page 1.) pha Carille, Hillsboro, treasurer, and Laura McAdams, Salem, chaplain. Ladies of the G. A. R., in addition to Rose Stewart of Portland, department president, elected the following officers: Mrs. Rosabella Keeler, Portland, senior vice president; Mable L. Traglio, Salem, junior vice president; Tillie Rodgers, Albany, councillor; Rose Garrison, Portland, treasurer; Luella Buck, Portland, secretary; Sarah Bell, Portland, chaplain; Myrtle Eskmann, Springfield, patriotic instructor; Kate Dixon, Zuba Paulson and Rosetta Buchanan, Portland, members of the administrative council. Installation of officers were completed in the afternoon.

Bits For Breakfast. The curtain rings down— The closing chapters are being written— And the three D'Autremonts will pass from the front pages of the newspapers for good and all. There is a democracy that is as it should be in the service upon which they enter now. They will each be known by a number, and they will receive the treatment their behavior may merit.
