FORESTRY CIRCULAR FOR TEACHERS OUT

Government Handbook Aids in Presenting Right Material in Schools

The increasing importance of the study of the forest and of forest products in both secondary and grade schools is recognized by the forest service, United States department of agriculture, in the publication of a new forestry handbook for teachers, copies of which have just been received at the district forester's office, Portland, Oregon.

The new bulletin (Miscellaneous Circular No. 98) is designed to help teachers choose the right material for lessons in forest study and present it with a varied appeal to the interest of children of different ages and grades. The booklet was prepared by D. Priscilla Edge, now state superintendent of forestry education of Mississippi, who has had large experience as a teacher and as an educational specialist of the forest service.

Forestry material adapted to the primary grades and detailed outlines for forest study in each term of the fifth to ninth grades are given in the handbook. The outlines present appropriate subject matter, illustrative material, study questions, practical exercises, suggestions for supplementary reading, and correlations with such subjects as language, geography, history, general science, agriculture and civics.

In addition to the lesson material, 15 practical experiments are outlined, and helpful suggestions are given for planning and managing field trips. Copies of the bulletin may be obtained as long as the supply lasts, by writing to the forest service, United States department of agriculture, Washington, D. C., after that from the Superintendent of Documents, Washington, D. C., at 30 cents a copy.

tons be recognized as a limit for the United States and Great Britain for cruisers and destroyers taken together, and that 300,000 tons be Japan's portion.

Since the United States originally recommended as a minimum 150,000 tons in cruisers for Japan and 12,000 tons in destroyers, Japan is asking only for 30,000 more tons for both classes than suggested in the American proposals.

Difficulty will be found perhaps in inducing Japan to specify in the treaty what proportion of auxiliary surface warships would be classed under the heading of cruisers, and what under destroyers. But experts seem in accord that under the Japanese plan,

LIVESTOCK GROWING HELD UNPROFITABLE

Baker Man Testifying at Commence Hearing Says Cowmen Want Car Basis

PORTLAND, July 7.—(AP)—William A. Stewart of Baker, president of the Oregon Cattle and Horse Raisers' association, testified today in the interstate commerce commission hearing on western livestock rates, that livestock industry in the Pacific northwest is a "little better" than it has been, but "is not yet profitable."

The hearing is being conducted before Chester E. Stiles and Arthur Parker, examiners of the commission.

Stewart testified that the cattlemen of eastern Oregon favored a per car basis rather than a weight basis upon their shipments, and, according to his declaration, Idaho stockmen with whom he talked, were of similar mind.

He went into detail in his recitation of market conditions and the position of the cattle raiser today. Many ranchers, he said, had given up the fight and surrendered their holdings to the banks and finance companies to whom they were indebted. Ranchers need help, he said.

Speaking of the quality of cattle marketed by the ranchers of the Pacific northwest, Stewart said: "The best feeding hay in this country and it will fatten steers so that it will compare favorably with the corn-fed animal of the middle-west."
