

PART-TIME SCHOOL GIVEN RECOGNITION

Publication of State Board of Vocational Education Praises Work

Recognition of the progressive nature of the Salem high school district in connection with the introduction of the part time continuation school, is given in an article in "The News Item," official publication of the Oregon state board of vocational education. The teacher is Miss Lillian Schroeder. The article follows:

"The Salem part-time school was organized in September, 1926, and has just closed with a successful record both in worth to the community and in attendance of pupils. The school enables the working minor to continue his education while earning and assists him to meet more encouragingly, as well as successfully, his civic and vocational responsibilities.

"The first consideration of the teacher has been to discover the needs of the individual students. Secondly, to plan the work to meet these individual needs by using information within the experience of the group for basic instruction material. Thirdly, to coordinate their outside activity with the home and school—to enroll the support of parents and employers in developing sympathetic attitude toward their employees. This not from a sentimental viewpoint alone, but rather from one of a more efficient working individual.

"Many of the students have been visited in their homes and on their jobs by the teacher who acts in the capacity of a coordinator. A total of 46 have been enrolled throughout the year, the majority of whom have attended for a period of eight hours a week. "Eleven of the group have finished requirements for graduation from the eighth grade. Some foreign-born students, newly-arrived pupils, have been aided in an appreciation of America and American ideals.

"It is the writer's impression that the part-time school is a forward step in school organization in Salem; that it is a deciding factor in adjusting the working boy and girl to their environment, both social and vocational, and is the only agency in this community whereby working children may continue their education.

"Superintendent George W. Hug has been influential in its organization and directly responsible for its administration. His interest in the working boys and girls of Salem in supplying the means for the continuance of their education reflects the attitude of a progressive administrator. Miss Schroeder is one of the few people who have the peculiar qualifications to carry on this type of work. Her presence in the Salem schools is indeed a credit to them."

BROADER VIEW NEEDED SAYS ASSOCIATION HEAD

Outstanding in the addresses of the day were the lectures delivered by Dr. N. S. C. Checkos, M. D., who is dean of the Pacific Chiropractic college in Portland. Dr. Checkos brought to the convention an understanding of a number of the more serious diseases. In his address on "The Differential Diagnosis of the Common Tubal Disorders," Dr. J. E. Long, of Salem, also spoke in the morning on "Infantile Paralysis."

The noon luncheon, held at the Elks' club, brought to the delegates an opportunity to hear the Hon. B. F. Mulkey, legal counsel for the association, and for eight years a member of the state legislative body.

LECTURES TONIGHT, FIRST M. E.

William Wallace Youngson, D. D., of Portland, who will deliver a lecture this evening at 8:30 o'clock at the First Methodist-Episcopal church, the program being sponsored by the Oregon Chiropractic association, now holding its 20th annual convention here. The lecture will be preceded by a musical program beginning at 8 o'clock. Dr. Youngson, who is pastor of the Rose City Park church in Portland, will have as his subject "Yesterday and Today."

which had been accomplished by the efforts made possible by a united association, along legislative lines, and predicted further advances for the profession in the near future.

Technique Discussed.

The afternoon session was spent in studies of chiropractic technique, under Dr. O. G. Fisher, Portland; Dr. Miles D. Warren, Portland, and Dr. H. J. Moran, Mt. Angel. Dr. Harry R. Mannell, an instructor in the Pacific Chiropractic college, also spoke on "The Endocrine Glands, Their Treatment and Diagnosis."

Clinics were held during the day, at which many Salem people were in attendance, and asked the advice of the experts in charge.

Throughout the day, the meetings were relieved from total seriousness by musical numbers by Miss Marion Boyle, Miss Joan Evans, and Miss June Director. At the luncheon and again in the evening, at the banquet, Cook Patton, Salem book dealer, and nationally known magician, entertained the group.

Banquet Well Attended

As an opportunity for the delegates to mingle in a social way, the banquet in the evening was noteworthy. In the tastefully decorated banquet room of the Marion hotel the delegates, about seventy of them, with their families and friends, listened to short talks from many of their group, including Dr. George Hoeye, retired, of Oregon City; Dr. John LaValley, of Portland; Dr. David E. Long, of Portland; Dr. O. G. Fisher, of Portland; Dr. Nellie Byrd, of Seattle; Dr. Harry Mannell, of Portland.

Others on the program included Mr. P. O. Riley, newspaper man from Hubbard, formerly superintendent of city schools of Chicago; and Miss Lois Beal, of Independence, who gave several excellent readings. Music for the banquet, and for the dance which followed, was by the Capitol theater orchestra, directed by Miss Holman.

Public Lecture Tonight

Today's program, beginning at 9 o'clock, with the invocation by Rev. Howard Mort, of Independence, includes the following: Memorial services for departed members, conducted by Rev. E. C. Whitaker, of the Salem First Christian church, an address, "Rectal Diseases," by Dr. F. T. Notz, former president of the state board of chiropractic examiners; an address, "Accommodation of the Human Eye," by Dr. H. Lee Pording, professor of anatomy and pathology at the North Pacific College of Optometry, and an address, "Diseases of the Gastro and Co. Regions," by Dr. Francis J. Kolar.

The noon luncheon will be held at the Spa, with an address by the president, Dr. Roy A. Peebles, tea-turing the meeting.

This afternoon, beginning at 2 o'clock, in the convention headquarters, the program is to be as follows: An address, "Legislative Activities," by Dr. David E. Long, newly appointed secretary of the state board of chiropractic examiners; an address, "Professional Ethics," by Dr. N. S. C. Checkos, M. D.; an address, "The Doctor as the Business Man Sees Him," by Senator Joseph E. Dunne, and an address, "Organization," by Dr. Charles O. Breach, special representative of the Oregon Chiropractic association.

An outstanding point in the whole convention comes in the evening, with the lecture by Rev. William Wallace Youngson, D. D., who recently completed a world tour on the floating university, the "Ryndam." Dr. Youngson has an international reputation as a lecturer, and is expected to draw a large audience of Salem people.

Dr. Youngson's lecture will be given in the First Methodist church auditorium, in order to accommodate the public, and is to be preceded by a half hour pipe organ concert, by Miss Marian Boyle, beginning at 8 p. m. Miss Boyle will be assisted by Miss Marian Porter on the harp.

Delegates to the convention are now numbering near the hundred mark, with more expected today and tomorrow, when the main business meetings of the convention will be held. Mention is being made of Portland, Ashland and Astoria as possible meeting places for next year, while the names of Dr. H. A. Reynolds, of Prineville, present vice president, and Dr. Harry R. Mantell, of Portland, have been mentioned as possible candidates for president for the coming year, to succeed Dr. Peebles.

Not Worth It.

Judge: Well, John, I can give you this divorce, but it will cost you three dollars.

John: Three dollars, boss?

Judge: That's the fee.

John: Well, boss, I jes' tell ya, I don't believe I wants no divorce. There ain't three dollars difference 'tween dem two wimmen.
