Business and Professional Women's Club Meets on Wednesday

The Business and Professional Women's club held their regular business meeting and dinner at the Gray Belle on Wednesday evening with about forty-five guests and members present.

Miss Maxine Ulrich gave as a banquet selection "Barcarolle." She granted as encore "The Rosary" and "A Perfect Day." Miss Ulrich was accompanied on the piano by Miss Lena Medler.

Rev. Martin Ferry reviewed the ten books which to him were the most important of the year. They were: "This Believing World" by Lewis Browne; "Napoleon" by Ludwig; "The Story of Philosophy" by Will Durant; "The Heart of Emerson's Journals"; "The Orphan Angel" by Dr. Wyley; "Revolt in a Desert" by Lawrence; "The Private Life of Helen of Troy" by Erskine; "Children of Divorce" by Owen Johnson; and "Elmer Gantry" by Sinclair Lewis.

Rev. Ferry stated that we, as a race, were growing intellectually lazy and made a strong appeal for more books. He emphasized the fact that books stimulate the mind and that we should read the ideas of other people.

A business meeting followed the dinner. The heads of the committees and officers for the year 1926-27 read their reports of the past year's work. The convention which will be held at Oakland, Cal., in July was discussed.

Miss Edna Purdy, retiring president, turned the gavel over to the new vice president, Mrs. Emily Ward. The new president, Miss Carlotta Crowley, was not present.

New officers for the coming year are: President, Miss Carlotta Crowley; vice president, Emily Howard; recording secretary, Phoebe McAdams; corresponding secretary, Edith Burch and treasurer, Josephine Shade.

The Oakland convention special will leave Portland on July 16 and will reach Oakland the following Sunday morning. The trip will be made over the scenic Cascade line with stops at Crescent lake, Shasta Springs and Klamath Falls.

PARIS ALL EXCITED AT FLIGHT RUMORS

Talk of Whole Flotillas of Planes Coming to Europe Circulated

PARIS, July 6.—(AP)—Public interest in America's trans-Atlantic aviators continued to rise today. It spread to aviation in general, and there were stories of whole flotillas of airplanes coming to Europe, of Charles Levine returning home as an air passenger in the Columbia with a French pilot at the "stick" of a 4,000-mile non-stop flight from Brussels to the Belgian Congo, across the heart of the Sahara, and further plans of Commander Byrd for exploring the region around the South Pole.

Stimulating this interest were numerous incidents of various kinds, the most dramatic of which happened when Commander Byrd and his comrades paid a visit to the Hotel Des Invalides, home of France's war wounded. It is here that the "broken wings" of the war are spending quiet days in peace.

The mutilated men were lined up to meet the American airmen, some of them standing, others in rolling chairs. Among the latter, was Captain Charles Legendre, a paralyzed French aviator, who was so moved by the appearance of Byrd and by the courage the American fliers had shown, that he determined he would walk. And he did walk.

With Byrd holding one arm and Noville the other, he mounted the stairway leading to Napoleon's tomb, and with them gazed down on the emperor's resting place for the first time, though he had lived within a few years of it since 1918.

Legendre, in a losing fight with a German plane over the harried terrain of Verdun, was shot through both legs, which have been almost helpless since, the muscles being torn away. The moment Byrd appeared, Legendre wheeled himself to the steps of the tomb. He was the first man to whom the commander was presented in the ranks of the "broken wings."

He looked up at Commander Byrd, and said: "I want to walk." Byrd, Noville and Acosta leaned over and grasped the cripple under the arms and stood him on his feet. Slowly and painfully he moved his "dead" legs and made his way up the steps leading to the entrance of the tomb.

They stood there while General Marivaux, who lost a leg in the war, told of the significance of the tomb and its torn battle flags of many historic struggles. When he was finished, Legendre said to Commander Byrd that, though he had lived only a few yards from the tomb for nearly nine years, it was the first time he had been inside, and added feelingly, "your courage gave me courage to try to walk again."
