SIDELIGHTS OF THE STAGE AND SCREEN

Capitol Theater

Five acts of Metropolitan Vaudeville and a screen feature are on the bill. Munsey Brothers present their sensational vehicle which constitutes a roller skating combination excelling any duo of this description in the versatility of entertainment of this kind. They combine exceptional skill in their fancy exhibitions, interspersed with sensational thrills and will unquestionably be accorded a hearty welcome as entertainers.

Joan Falcy, "The surprise girl" offers an oddity comprised of dancing, piano playing and contortion work, which is a feature of the act. There is nothing freakish in the style of her work; she is blessed with a charming personality; and is considered a perfect figure. Her presentation differs vastly from other acts of this kind. Her work is a revelation and her costumes are of the best.

Alsaac & Lorraine true to their billing, "present a brilliant musical specialty." They appear in a repertoire of songs from grand opera to jazz. They also introduce the "Alsaacphone," the violin with the human voice. The act is a classy bit that has splendid entertaining qualities and is absolutely unique in its entirety, full of good melodious music and played in a manner that will be appreciated by all lovers of instrumental music.

Russ Berlio and Brother, acknowledged the leading exponents of the flying rings, their efforts in performing sensational feats are such as to warrant them being placed in a class of their own. Where the average ring artist leaves off, this clever team begins. In other words, their exhibition is wholly of that sensational dare devil order that makes their act stand out pre-eminently. The time consumed is only seven minutes and the slightest slip and the result would be hard to conjecture.

Lynne Sisters are two dainty looking girls who understand the proper idea in putting over songs both character and jazz. The young ladies possess splendid voices which blend in perfect harmony. The songs used by the Lynne Sisters are specially fitting and are universally received with the highest appreciation. The girls make a specialty of numbers of the most popular kind and they wear some pretty costumes.

On the screen at the Capitol today will be "The Lure of the Night Club."

Elsinore Theater

The tom-tom of the Indians, that insistent pulsation of the drums that carries its message for unbelievable distances and has never been satisfactorily solved by science, forms the basis for "Drums of the Desert" adapted from Zane Grey's romantic story "Desert Bound" which shows at the Elsinore today.

Translated to the screen by Paramount under the direction of John Waters, that interpreter of Zane Grey novels into terms of screen action "Drums of the Desert" visualizes the colorful action of the original story. In it is told the tale of the Navajos and of the liquid gold that underlay their sacred shrines in the Arizona desert, the story of a white man's conspiracy to defraud them of those lands and of the frustration of that conspiracy by another white man. Underlying, as in the original, are the tom-toms of the Indian—those incessant drums calling the red men first to council and then to war against the encroachment of an enemy.

Through the story moves the heroic figure of John Curry as played by Warner Baxter, friend of the Indian. Opposite Baxter is Paramount's new European player, Marietta Milner, fresh from triumph abroad, whose first intimate glimpse of American life was on the Navajo Indian reservation where "Drums of the Desert" was made.

Oregon Theater

Hard riding, hard fighting and stunts of daring that thrill every nerve are the outstanding features of Buck Jones' splendid picture of the Basque country of the Pacific southwest, which shows at the Oregon today for last time.

There is not a dull moment in this story of the cowboy who comes to the settlement of the Basques seeking vengeance for the death of his brother and finds romance and adventure as well as the sinister thing he seeks. Natalie Joyce is the dainty little Spanish beauty who is the girl in the story, and she gives a perfect performance. But it is Buck, the hardriding, dare-devil cowboy, who furnishes the thrills and laughter. Here is a picture that will make you forget your troubles, because it will just take you out of yourself. And in addition to a rip roaring thriller you will enjoy seeing some of the most beautiful country ever shot by the camera. A picture for the whole family. And that was the verdict of all who saw the first showing of "Whispering Sage" yesterday.
