them conversant with the practical details of highway construction and maintenance will be guided by their own judgment as to the efficiency of the present administration, and not by any outside pressure that may be brought to bear, it is believed here.

The agitation for a change, while not traced to any particular individuals, is believed to emanate from one section of the state that has a candidate for the office and hopes to be specially favored in its highway program through having a representative in the office.

Should this be the case, it will be easily apparent to the members of the commission, and will carry little weight.

Mr. Klein has filled the office for a number of years, and no adverse criticism of his conduct of it has been heard from sources competent to judge; the present agitation has as yet developed none, but merely a request that some other person be appointed.
