FLYERS SWIM ASHORE FROM WRECKED AIRPLANE

'Well, it's better to have fallen into San Francisco Bay, a few hundred yards off shore, than to have dropped into the middle of the Pacific Ocean,' remarked Captain James L. Giffin, Los Angeles, as, with Theodore Lundgren, his navigator, and a friend, as they clambered ashore after their airplane, the Pride of Los Angeles, entered in the Dole Hawaii air race, fell off Oakland airport. Photo shows them reaching shore. Insets are close-ups, left of Giffin, who also is an attorney, and Lundgren.

'The growing seeds of various kinds in commercial quantity is being advocated as an industry in which farmers and gardeners in the Willamette valley can engage with reasonable assurance of prosperity.'

Bits For Breakfast

It always comes back—

The right kind of weather, in the Willamette valley.

Look, from this time on, for the most beautiful and comfortable late summer and fall weather you could find if you went around the world looking for the best.

Man who heard the Legion drum corps last night remarked that it was no wonder the organization captured the state trophy for keeps.

And he does serve. No man in Washington works harder or with more effectiveness—

And he 'brings home the bacon.' That is, he gets the appropriations needed in his district.

These are a few of the reasons why he gets the most votes, and why he should get the most votes. No other man can serve his district as well. Not, at least, till after several successive terms—

And it is no time to swap horses while crossing a stream—

And the first congressional district of Oregon has a lot of streams to cross. A lot of unfinished business. A lot of rivers and harbors to improve and other public works under way or proposed to forward or finish.

The list of good reasons might be extended to great length, including the fact that Mr. Hawley at Washington is servant there to every individual in his district, and holds himself ready to serve each one, as many thousands of them have found by experience gratefully remembered.

There are a lot of deserving men in the first district who would do very well in congress, not the least among them being James W. Mott, one of the most able men in debate of them all.

But no one can do as well as Willis C. Hawley.

IT IS SO SILLY

An Oregon exchange says: 'From time to time some one rises in our midst to tell us that Oregon does all the kicking and quarreling and that everything is serene and lovely from January to December in California.'

This is all very silly. It is to be hoped that the people of the Sacramento valley cities may think better of it. The carrying out of the plan would be an impertinence that would be resented by every tourist of intelligence—

It would do the Sacramento valley towns much more harm than good; and ought to.

The death penalty has always made a monkey of the law, and always will. Present evasions in states and counties having capital punishment are puny compared with the time in England, when there were 100 and more crimes punishable by death.

WORK TO START ON NEW CHURCH FIRST OF WEEK

The building when completed will be one of the most beautiful and imposing structures in the city, and will house what is said will be the best religious educational equipment in the north-west, if not in the coast.

The main auditorium of the church will seat 600, it is planned. The whole building will have over 50 rooms to accommodate the various departments of the religious educational work, as well as the other work to be carried on in the church.

The building is to be finished in red brick, with a colonial design, and will have a tall spire rising above the entrance, which will face on Cheneketa street at the corner of the block.

The old church building on Church street will be used by the Presbyterian body until the completion of the new building, after which it will be taken over by the American Lutheran church, which at present is holding one meeting a week in the building.

PORTLANDER DROWNS

PORTLAND, Aug. 18.—(AP)—Leonard Baunister, 17, of Portland, lost his life while swimming in the Willamette river here late today.

He was bathing with several companions and in diving from a log raft, struck his head on some submerged piling.

His body sank from sight instantly and was recovered only after an hour's work by the harbor patrol.

'I see Goldbaum had a fire last night.'

'Well, he's a nice feller; he deserves it.'

FRANTIC HUNT FOR 2 LOST PLANES FUTILE

Angelo, were unanimous in the opinion that the Golden Eagle, traveling at a cruising speed of 114 miles an hour, sped over the islands during the night without traveling at a cruising speed of 60 miles an hour or aware that the goal had been reached.

Less concern was felt over the safety of the metal, sealed Golden Eagle, than for the biplane, Miss Doran, carrying its namesake, the school teacher and her companions.

Not Safely Built

The Miss Doran was not built to float for any great length of time. The crew would have to take to its life raft immediately after a forced landing and there was a possibility that the water landing was not made successfully.

Every available agency on the Pacific was volunteered for the search today and as night fell, over 62 naval and merchant ships were swinging into the great circle steamer lane between San Francisco and Honolulu to seek the missing planes.

At the Oakland municipal airport two airmen urged government officials for approval of their desires to join the hunt. Captain William Erwin, pilot of the Dallas Spirit, installed a radio set aboard his plane and said he would start out for Honolulu early in the morning, working in conjunction with the navy.

Radio Needed

C. W. Parkhurst, pilot of the Air King, wanted to fly several miles out to sea today but was urged by naval officers to abandon the idea because his plane was not radio equipped, thus could be of little aid to the searching vessels.

From Crissy field in San Francisco an average of four planes left hourly during the day to cover a radius of 200 miles off shore and reporting back to headquarters by radio every five minutes, always negatively.

Two mail planes of the Pacific Air Transport company, left San Francisco to aid in the off-shore hunt.

The airplane carrier Langley, carrying 20 planes, and the airplane tender, Aroostook, with other land and sea planes were expected to reach the great circle on their trip from San Diego tonight, wait for morning and then proceed slowly westward toward the islands while the planes deployed from the ship's decks a hundred miles on either side of the ship lane.

About the Taking of Life

Editor Statesman:

God is the author of all life, from the lowest to the highest, plant life, animal life, human life. Animal life is sustained by the production of plant life and also by the bodies of other animal life. Human life is also thus sustained; everything we eat and wear must first die. We have no choice about it. The universe is not a mechanism but an organism.

While we are thus compelled to take lower forms of life, we are commanded most positively not to take human life. 'He that sheddeth the blood of man, by man shall his blood be shed, for God created man in his own image.'

In those days, when the law of God was recognized as a whole, a case was to rest on, and be established by the mouth of two or three witnesses. It was not difficult to get an innocent man out of the way, but God, who had given the law, would know the innocence and quickly, after death, 'wipe away every tear from his eyes.'

Arthur Goebel, pilot of the winning plane, Woolaroc, and Martin Jensen, who drove the Aloha to win second place, more concerned for the safety of the other contestants than joyous in victory, announced plans to fly their machines in the search.

Goebel said that he and his navigator, Lieutenant W. V. Davis of the navy would take off in the Woolaroc as soon as they could get her into the air, and would fly the machine a hundred miles in every direction from Wheeler field in the endeavor to locate the Golden Eagle and the Miss Doran.

A report, unverified, that an object resembling a plane had been seen floating eight miles off Honolulu, island of Hawaii, caused the navy station at Pearl Harbor, to dispatch vessels to investigate. They were actuated by the intention to neglect no clue, however intangible, that might lead to the rescue of the missing fliers.

From the neighboring island of Molokai came the report that opinion was unanimous among residents that the missing planes could not have landed on that island without being observed. Lookouts had kept constant vigil from early Wednesday, but had sighted neither plane although visibility was pronounced perfect.

The army planes will start out over the ocean at 8 o'clock tomorrow morning to continue the search.

Liquor Raids Conducted By City Police; Arrest 3

Two raids on the part of city police yesterday afternoon resulted in the arrest of three people on charges of the sale of intoxicating liquor, and the issuing of a warrant for a fourth.

Pat Campi and Mrs. Grace Campi, man and wife, living at 1620 State street, were arrested when police raided their place armed with a warrant sworn to by private parties. No liquor was found on the premises, but evidence pointing to the sale of intoxicating beverages is said to have been secured.

Lucile Albright, of 175 South 13th street, was arrested shortly after the other raid, at her home, on a similar charge. A warrant is said to be out for another person in connection with the latter arrest.

All three parties were said to have been released later in the afternoon on bail, although no record of their release was entered on the police blotter.

Both raids were made by City Officers Thomason, James, Kuykendall, and Edwards.
