LABOR PRESS HITS SALEM CANNERIES

Says There is No Need for Organization of the Cannery Workers Here

(Oregon Labor Press

Complaints coming to Secretary Osborne of the State Federation of Labor concerning alleged deplorable conditions existing in canneries at a near Salem has caused Mr. Osborne to refer the matter to officials of the Salem central labor council and request them to make an investigation to learn what course may be pursued that may result in improvement of conditions.

One complaint as to the meager wages paid to women and of the general conditions indicate that there is a need for organization of the workers.

One complaint that came in this week was to the effect that on one day last week one cannery provided work from 7 in the morning until 11 and that the women worked during period. Figured on were a little less than 17 cents an hour, but when it is considered that but 67 1/2 cents were earned during the entire day's need for regular employment at adequate wages, the full import of the situation appears. Mr. Osborne expects the Salei council officer's investigations and recommendations to point to a possible solution in the interests of the women cannery workers.

Salem Canner Answers Answering the above, printed in the Oregon Labor Press, Portland, on Friday, a Salem cannery says the labor conditions in the Salem district canneries are good, compared with those anywhere. Two to three thousand women and girls are given employment during the busy canning season here, at fair and in many cases, with expert workers, high wages. Hundreds of thousands of dollars are paid to these workers, from the spring till up towards Christmas time, when the last of the apples are canned.

He says there is a slack time, between loganberries and pears, when short runs must be made, on Himalaya and evergreen and other blackberries, and most of the workers are willing to take short shifts, to save the crops.

He says Salem would be a dull place without the cannery workers and those who work in the canneries, in all cases under pleasant conditions, would have a hard time to keep their children in school and in comfortable circumstances without the cannery money they receive; and of course the canners could not do without the workers. Nor could they pay higher wages than they do pay, for canning is done on a small margin, and with risk in most. He insists that any body of meat relations of the Salem canners are no friends to either the workers, the rest of the people of Salem, nor the producers of the fruits and vegetables that supply canneries.

$1,000,000 DAILY PAID IN GAS TAXES IN U. S.

(Continued from page 1) a commodity, which, prior to the year 1919 was not used as a source of revenue, will return taxes in the year 1927 of between $250,000,000 and $275,000,000. "Oregon was the first state to impose a tax of one cent per gallon on gasoline in the year 1919. It was followed successively in the same year by Colorado and North Dakota. In the year 1922 Kentucky enacted a one cent tax law. In the year 1921 Arizona, Connecticut, Florida, Montana, New Mexico, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, Washington and Arkansas followed with laws imposing a one cent tax. "In the year 1922 the states of Georgia, Louisiana, Maryland, Mississippi and South Dakota voted a one cent tax. South Carolina in the same year imposed a two cent tax. The other states, with the exception of Massachusetts and New York, have since followed in line. The tax in the respective states has been gradually increased at successive sessions of the legislature until the rates now run from two to five cents per gallon.
