Numerous Letters Reach Normal School Asking Information on Meetings

OREGON NORMAL SCHOOL, MONMOUTH, Ore., Aug. 23.—Announcement last week of plans for an educational conference on the subject "Objective Testing," which is to be held here next Friday, August 26, numerous letters have been arriving indicating the general interest in the subject on the part of teachers from all parts of the state.

The morning session of the conference, which meets in the auditorium of the training school, will be given over to the consideration of the present status of objective testing in Oregon.

A survey of the work of the year in this field will be given by a number of the prominent educators of the state, including C. A. Howard, superintendent of public instruction, E. F. Carlton, editor of the state teachers' association journal, Brenton Vedder, prominent county superintendent, Miss Jean Palliam, classroom teacher, E. H. Ruh, of the Oregon Educational Tests association, W. A. Dickson, of the Portland Principals' association, and G. B. Lamb, who will speak on the attitude of the general public toward the tests.

Following the survey, a general discussion of the advantages and disadvantages of objective tests will be conducted, with its good features being discussed by Superintendents Susanna Homes-Carter and Elizabeth Murray, and its disadvantages pointed out by Superintendent J. E. Myers, supplemented by Emma Bryant, Mary Fulkerson, and Robert Currier.

Professor Thomas H. Gentle, head of the department of training schools of the normal school will give a summary of the trend of the discussion, before adjourning for lunch, which will be served in the training school cafeteria.

The afternoon session will take up the problems involved in the future development of objective testing in the state.

Professor Howard Taylor, of the University of California, will discuss the problem of scoring, followed by another speaker on the question of an adequate examining board as a means of solving some of the difficulties faced at present.

Using as a basis the work which has already been done under her direction in this field, Julia A. Spooner, well known Portland grade school teacher, will speak on the subject, "Shall History be the next field of objective tests?" Succeeding this will be a discussion of several objectives for 1933.

After a brief intermission, President Norman F. Coleman, of Reed College, will deliver an address on "The New Emphasis on Self Education."

The final session of the day will be the annual meeting of the Oregon Educational Test association, which is expected will be finished by 4:30 p. m., allowing those present to return home during the afternoon, or to proceed

SIDELIGHTS OF THE STAGE AND SCREEN

Elsinore Theater
Harry Langdon in his latest fast moving comedy, "Three's A Crowd," finishes its engagement at the Elsinore today. Eddie Magill, the sweetest of sweet singers is also on this program, and this evening at nine o'clock the annual style show will be held. All the latest in Milady's fashions will be displayed by living models chosen from among Salem's most beautiful young ladies.

If you want to see a notable assemblage of stars in a vehicle worthy of their talents, go to the Elsinore Theater tomorrow. "For the Love of Mike," the first National production which opened here yesterday comes up to that high standard.

Ben Lyon has the leading role with George Sidney, Ford Sterling, Claudette Colbert, Hugh Cameron, Richard Skeets Gallagher, Rudolph Cameron and Mabel Swor.

This is a perfect cast, as is evident. The story is no less perfect. It is about a foundling who is discovered by three bachelors living in the notorious Hell's Kitchen district in New York. The men are an Irishman, a German and a Jew and all three claim the little youngster but compromise at last by agreeing to bring him up cooperatively, so to speak.

Ben Lyon has the part of the boy, with George Sidney, Ford Sterling and Hugh Cameron as his "fathers." Claudette Colbert, well known stage star recruited pictures for the first time by Robert Kane, who produced "For the Love of Mike," is seen as the boy's childhood sweetheart and Mabel Swor enacts the role of the Fifth avenue blonde who tries to make him forget his old pals and join her ritzy set.

Not only "for the love of Mike," but for your own sake, this is one picture you positively must see!

WEEK-ENDS AT NETARTS

STAYTON, Aug. 23.—(Special.)—Aldred Martin, correspondent for a Salem newspaper, is spending the week at Netarts. He is accompanied by his wife and son.

mont Schoedsack packed up his motion picture camera and wondered what he was going to do for excitement. He had been photographing bursting shells, midnight raids, trench life and airplane attacks; had attained the rank of captain, and couldn't enthuse about the prospect of returning to studio life in Hollywood.

So he enlisted in the American Red Cross and went to Poland to help make Poland unsafe for visiting Bolsheviks. He photographed the famous retreat of the Polish army, and became a pal of Merian C. Cooper, American aviator.

After the Polish disturbance calmed down he went to the Graeco-Turkish front in Syria and made news reel pictures of the burning of Smyrna during the Greek retreat.

In the mean time, Cooper had shipped on a small schooner that was touring the world on a scientific expedition. At Singapore the cameraman quit and Cooper cabled to Schoedsack.

During a storm in the Red Sea the schooner went aground at Mocha, eighty miles north of Aden and the expedition came to an end. For the next seven months Cooper and Schoedsack dickered with Turkish officials for permission to photograph the migrations of the Kurds over the mountain ranges running south from the Black Sea to Mesopotamia.

Schoedsack then made arrangements for another trip into fat-off places and shipped with the William Beebe expedition on the Arcurus.

On July 7, 1925, he and Cooper left New York for Bangkok, Siam, where they made "Chang" universally acknowledged one of the year's best pictures. Paramount is presenting it at the Oregon starting tomorrow.

Schoedsack is now thirty-three years old. He began his career as a cameraman in Hollywood.

SPECIAL MATINEE TO BE AT OREGON

Coupon and Five Cents Admits Children to Showing of "Chang"

The Statesman has arranged with the management of the Oregon theater for a special matinee for children tomorrow at noon.

On the front page of this morning's issue, there is a coupon printed, which if clipped, and presented at the box office, together with 5c, admittance can be obtained to witness one of the greatest pictures of all time. "Chang" is utterly different from any photoplay ever made, in that although ferocious animals of the jungle—tigers, leopards, elephants, great snakes and chattering monkeys are the principal actors—the picture contains a basic plot, skillfully embroidered with the conventional dramatic forms of sympathy, struggle, menace, tragedy, pathos and exceptional comedy, furnished by a white gibbon named Bimbo.

"Chang" will be presented at the Oregon tomorrow under the auspices of Paramount, which organization financed Cooper and Schoedsack in their extraordinary effort.

The theme of "Chang" is most elemental—the conflict of man against his implacable foe, the jungle, and the hostile beasts sheltered by its abundant foliage.

In making "Chang" Cooper and Schoedsack constantly faced death, not only from tigers, elephants, leopards and snakes, but from cholera which took the lives of seven native members of their expedition. Schoedsack himself was stricken with a severe attack of malaria which delayed work on the film.

As the protagonists of man in his eternal fight to wrest a living from the wild, the producer chose an heroic Siamese family—a man, his wife, their two children, household pets and Bimbo, the monkey.

There is a big time in store for all children in Salem, and the Statesman's hope is that every kiddie in town will take advantage to this treat to attend the matinee tomorrow.

SANDERS ON VACATION

DR. HALL PRAISES PACIFIC INSTITUTE

Every Precaution Taken to Prevent Misunderstandings Among Nations

UNIVERSITY OF OREGON, Eugene, Aug. 23.—(Special.)—The Institute of Pacific Relations, which is composed of men selected from all the countries bordering on the Pacific ocean, is doing a work of world-wide importance, it is declared by Dr. Arnold Bennett Hall, president of the University of Oregon, who attended the session held in Honolulu, Hawaii, a few weeks ago.

Dr. Hall specialized in social science research work at the Institute, in addition to taking an active part in the various discussion groups.

"The problems of the Pacific may seem to be mostly in the future, but such is not the case," declares Dr. Hall. "Japan illustrates the fact that over population is one of the most serious situations to be faced, and if people work to solve Japan's pressing problem, it will aid in solutions when such countries as the United States and Australia begin to feel the burden of too many inhabitants for the land. Thus it is seen that the future can be definitely linked up with the present."

"The Institute, which is composed of experts in international, inter-racial, social and educational problems, aims to bring before the people the importance of the problems of this vast area, rather than to attempt any definite solutions. Problems such as international relations, world markets, overpopulation, religious work and others are brought before this group and are thoroughly discussed. The Institute makes no recommendations, but it offers its findings to the proper officials who can use them as a basis for negotiations that eventually result in better feeling and mutual cooperation between nations."

Dr. Hall was so impressed with the work that the Institute is doing, and with the ability of the members, that he is already hoping to induce the organization to hold a session in Eugene some time in the future. The group meets for two weeks every two years, and has selected some place in either Japan or China for the next session. The exact city will be named later, it was said.

The meeting four years from now may be held on the Pacific coast, and there are only two places that will bid for it, it is believed. These are Eugene and the University of Oregon, and Stanford University. Stanford would have a very good chance, since Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, its president, is also head of the Institute, but it is believed that the northwest would have more of interest to offer the members, since it is in this region that great developments in connection with the Orient are expected.

The University of Oregon buildings could be utilized by the members and it is pointed out that here they would have excellent library facilities also, in addition to other conveniences.

"The Institute has more than 150 members who attended the Honolulu session, and it is probable that the number will be greatly increased within the next few years. In the group are leaders in many lines of thought as well as experts in technical divisions. Probably no other group in the world is more representative of the countries from which they come, points out Dr. Hall and so it would be a great asset to the state and the northwest to have them become familiar with this section of the United States.

The Pacific northwest, itself rich in potentialities, is the nearest point in the United States to the Orient, and it will become a great shipping center when conditions in the Far East are more settled, it is believed. Members of the Institute are already showing a great deal of interest in this section, and asked many questions of those attending from this region, it is stated.

Countries represented in the Institute include the United States, Great Britain, China, Japan, Australia, New Zealand, Korea, the Philippines, Samoa, and the territory of Hawaii. Problems of all these regions were thoroughly discussed with special emphasis being placed on China and its present relations with other countries.

"One of the most significant facts that was stressed by Dr. Wilbur at the Institute was that the growing power of the United States in the Pacific may become one of the region's most serious problems," says Dr. Hall. "Because we are a nation of great resources, enjoying prosperity, we are likely to become self-centered, self-assured, and inclined to give scant consideration to problems of other people. This we cannot afford to do, because the problems of other people affect us, and if other countries, especially the Far East, fall into unfortunate conditions, we shall suffer. We must take an attitude of sympathy and understanding, and must be willing to cooperate with the world in every way."

"It is highly important at this time that the people of the United States give thought to the problems of the Pacific, with the view to furthering relations for peace in this region," concluded Dr. Hall. "War in the Pacific, where so many hundreds of millions of people live, would be the worst disaster in history, and every precaution should be taken to avoid the possibility of misunderstandings that might lead to this. Such institutions as the Institute of Pacific Relations take up these problems and present them in clearer form. This group should be encouraged in every way, and if it could be brought to Eugene some time, I am sure that we would all greatly benefit."

Waistlines Again In Vogue, Noted; Fashion Revue Again Tonight

Fall, with its days of glorious golden beauty is almost upon us, and it will be welcome, if one may judge from the fall styles in women's apparel displayed in the fashion revue at the Elsinore theater last night.

Aside from colors, one noticed in the street dresses, afternoon and evening gowns, and fall coats displayed by models, from Wilson's fashion shop, that waistlines are again in vogue—slight, it is true, but nevertheless waistlines. These are effected with belts, rather low, and loose, though the general impression is one of straight lines.

One of the first things Milady's seamstress must learn, in yesterday, was to fashion a gown with an even hem. It is not so now, although perhaps even more care must be taken now to obtain an attractive uneven hem.

Semi-sash and drapes effects will be noted on many gowns, and even among the various coat styles.

Colors in coats include many shades of brown, usually with a darker shade in fur collars and cuffs. Fur on the collars is used lavishly, and most coats follow a one-button style, fastening on the side. Fur is used with all colors, dark blue, black, and gray, and the fur varies from ermine and black, against the solid black, to silver gray against dark blue, and against light gray. In some instances uneven dress hems show slightly below the coat.

In evening gowns, silver trim predominates, being used with many combinations of blue, salmon pink, pink, green, black, and other interesting shades. Silver as well as silk fringe effects, some even extending from the waistline, are especially striking.

Hats in delightful combinations of browns, tans, blacks, greens, and just a touch of yellow with the brown and green, with rhinestone decorations, were displayed by Milady's Hat shop (formerly Mrs. Stith's). Quarter veils added distinction to some of the models. Rhinestones were also used in various combinations on many of the afternoon and evening gowns, and for the buckle effect with some street dresses.

Shoes, including patent leathers, satin pumps for afternoon and evening, and some for street wear, matched the coats and hats. The shoes were from Price's shoe store.

Elaborate stage settings, showing a tastefully furnished drawing room, were arranged by H. L. Stiff Furniture company.

Models who participated in the fashion revue last night included Mrs. R. H. Martin, Miss Vivian Nelson, Miss Davis, Miss Virginia Billings, Mrs. Davis Morpew, Mrs. Grace Stiffier, Miss Lucille Anderson and Miss Faye Woltz.

The fashion revue will be continued again this evening at the Elsinore at 9 o'clock to accommodate many who could not attend last night. Many other Paris creations will be displayed in addition to those shown last night, it was announced.

BAND ENDS SEASON

CROWD OF 4000 BRAVES THREATENING WEATHER

Threatening weather last night diminished what was anticipated to be the record crowd of the season, although 4000 or more persons gathered in Wilson park for the last semi-weekly concert of a series of 18 given by the Salem Cherrians during the past nine weeks.

The last concert was composed mainly of request numbers, numbers that have proven of more than passing popularity with the audiences during the season.

Many encores were demanded of Oscar B. Gingrich, vocalist, in addition to his two scheduled songs, which included "My Wild Irish Rose," "If You See Sally" and others.

"We have enjoyed knowing that Salem has enjoyed our efforts," Oscar Steelhammer, director of the band, said last night.
