ELSINORE THEATER
That Robert Kane goes in for authenticity of atmosphere in his pictures was evidenced when he sent out invitations to prominent Tammany Hall leaders and members of the Harvard and Yale clubs to take part in his latest First National Picture, "For the Love of Mike," which will bring an impressive cast to the Elsinore Theater today.

The Tammany chieftains were asked to come up and inspect, and play in, if they so desired, a huge set designed by Robert Haas, the art director, to represent a Tammany club banquet.

The Harvard and Yale clubs were invited to sit in on the "Yale-Harvard" crew race, which is a highlight of the film. In lieu of a boat race, the college men watched a picture being made and Kane got a colorful cargo of passengers for the observation train he built in the Cosmopolitan Studio in New York.

This Harvard-Yale regatta in "For the Love of Mike" was shot from a great many angles. Close-ups of the race, with Skeets Gallagher acting as coxswain of a crew stroked by Ben Lyon, were taken at the New Rochelle Rowing club course. The scenes showed Hugh Cameron, George Sidney, Ford Sterling and Claudette Colbert cheering Ben from an observation train. The actual race was photographed by Joseph Boyle at New London when the famous regatta between Yale and Harvard took place.

As an added attraction, Eddie Magill, the warbling singer of sweet songs who has been delighting audiences the past week, will be heard in a new program, together with a delightful comedy, entitled, "Cool Off" and one of the latest reels showing all the world news.

HUSBANDS NOT LAZY PENDING AIR RACES

Everyone Works at Spokane to Improve Airport for Great Event

SPOKANE, Wash., Aug. 24.—(Special)—Lazy husbands aren't nearly so lazy in Spokane since the Spokane air port was awarded the seventh annual national air races, and designated as the terminus for the National Air Derby race from New York, and the Pacific coast Air Derby race from San Francisco.

"Lazy husbands! What are they good for—nothing!" This is undoubtedly what the wives of lazy husbands think about their men, but Major John T. Fancher, managing director of the National Air Derby association of Spokane, is a little inclined to disagree.

It's not that Major Fancher is a friend of the lazy husbands that makes him lean their way, but because of the work they have done in removing tons and tons of "finger head" rocks from the mile and a half by a half mile wide landing field, where the national air races will be flown.

Sheriff Floyd Brower of Spokane county has a rule that all lazy husband prisoners must work, and at the request of Major Fancher he agreed that the lazy husbands should prepare the Spokane air port for the races. Each morning for the last three months a large truck has backed up to the jail door, taken the prisoners eight miles to the air port, where, rain or shine, they "heaved to" on picks, shovels and crow-bars for eight hours a day. Armed guards stand over them all day.

"Regardless of what they are, they have certainly made the Spokane air port one of the most perfect landing fields in the country," said Major Fancher, who landed on fields in Chicago, Cleveland, Washington, D. C., and Detroit on his recent flight to New York.

In smoothness and speed the Spokane air port will compare favorably with a large dance floor at the time of the national air races. Since the removal of the rock by the lazy husband prisoners large drags and scrapers have worked the field both directions, making it perfectly level. A large steam roller is now rolling the field, which is expected to be almost entirely covered with wild grass at the time of the races.

"We have made arrangements with the city officials whereby we are to secure 3000 feet of fire hose for the purpose of flooding the field," said Major Fancher. "This flooding will bring up the wild grass, and give us absolute assurance against any dust during the races."

It is also being proposed to secure the services of all city sprinkler wagons at the close of each day's program for the purpose of sprinkling the field all night for the next day's program.

"If we had been forced to pay for the removal of the rocks removed by the prisoners, we would have been dead broke for the rest of our lives," said Major Fancher, who believes the prisoners are entitled to see part of the aviation program for nothing because of the work they have done.

Newark bicycle race and Philadelphia wrestling match postponed the same night because of rain. And some say there is no such thing as Providence.

COURTNEY'S FLIGHT AGAIN POSTPONED

Orders New Delay for 24 Hours When Generator Found Burned Out

SOUTHAMPTON, ENGLAND, AUG. 24.—(AP)—Postponement for at least 24 hours of the start of Captain F. Courtney's proposed trans-Atlantic flight followed upon a futile attempt by the aviator to take-off late today. Not only did the "Whale" refuse to rise with its heavy fuel load after having taxied several times long distances on Southampton waters, but it was found that the front motor was not functioning perfectly and that the wireless generator was burnt out.

It was announced that repairs would be made tomorrow and that a quantity of the petrol would be removed to lessen the weight. Probably short test flights will be carried out in the afternoon. It is hoped, however, to have everything working properly by evening so as to permit a take-off.

CURTISS FIELD, N. Y. AUG. 24.—(AP)—Ensign Stephen Edwards, U. S. N., as radio operator, will be the third member of the crew of the Ville de Paris, the plane in which Captain Rene Fonck hopes to make a trans-Atlantic hop, it was stated today.

The navigator will be Lieutenant Lawrence W. Curtin, who escaped uninjured when Fonck's plane crashed in flames, killing two men, in an attempted take-off for Paris last year.

The interior of the cabin of the Ville de Paris was upholstered today in brown snakeskin. The skins, of which more than a hundred were used, were presented by friends in Paris, Captain Fonck said.
