ENGLISH SCIENTIST LAUDS MR. DARWIN
Sir Arthur Keith Gives Human Race Antiquity of 1,000,000 Years

LEEDS, ENGLAND, AUG. 31. (AP)—Darwin was right, declared Sir Arthur Keith, the distinguished scientist, in addressing the British Association for the Advancement of Science here tonight. Sir Arthur not only agreed that man had descended from an ape-like being, but he gave mankind an antiquity of a million years.

Sir Arthur was delivering the inaugural presidential address before the association, which met today for its ninety-sixth annual session. It was before this same august body in Leeds many years ago that there was initiated the controversy over the descent of man which swept the whole civilized world and still remains a burning question.

Sir Arthur Keith, who succeeds the Prince of Wales as president of the association, took for his address tonight the formidable text of "Darwin's Theory of Man's Descent as It Stands Today." Sir Arthur said in part:

Process Complex
"The evidence of man's evolution from an ape-like being, obtained from a study of fossil remains, is definite and irrefutable, but the process has been infinitely more complex than was suspected in Darwin's time. Our older and discarded conception of man's transformation was depicted in the well known diagram which showed a single line of skeletons, the gibbon at one end and the man at the other.

"In our original simplicity we expected, as we traced man backwards in time, that we should encounter a graded series of forms—a series which would carry him in a straight line towards an anthropoid ancestor. We should have never made this fatal mistake if we had remembered that the guide to the world of the past is the world of the present. In our time man is represented not by the but by many and diverse types, the white and yellow and black, some of these are rapidly expanding, others are

Diversity Mentioned
"Our searches have shown that in remote times the world was peopled, sparsely, it is true, with races showing an even greater diversity than those of today, and that already the same process of replacement was at work. To unravel man's pedigree, we have to thread our way, not along the links of a chain, but through the meshes of a complicated network.

"We made another mistake. Seeing that in our search for man's ancestry we expected to reach an old age when the beings we should have to deal with would be simian rather than human, we ought to have marked the condition which prevails among living anthropoid apes. We ought to have been prepared to find, as we approached a distant point in the geological horizon, that the forms encountered would be as widely different as are the gorilla, chimpanzee and orang, and confined, as these great anthropoids now are, to limited parts of the earth's surface.

Become Unlike
"That is what we are now realizing; as we go backwards in time we discover that mankind becomes broken up, not into separate races as in the world of today, but into numerous and separate species. When we go into a still more remote past they become so unlike that we have to regard them not as belonging to separate species, but different genera.

"There are other difficulties. There still remain great blanks in the geological record of man's evolution. By the discovery of fossil remains we have followed man backwards to the close of the pleistocene—a period which endured at least for a quarter of a million years, but we have not yet succeeded in tracing him through this period.

"It is true that we found fossil teeth in pleistocene deposits which may be those of an ape-like man or of a man-like ape; until we find other parts of their bodies we cannot decide. When we pass into the still older miocene period—one which was certainly twice as long as the pleistocene—we are in the heyday of anthropoid history.

Million Years Antiquity
"All the evidence now at our disposal supports the conclusion that man has arisen, as La Marek and Darwin suspected, from an anthropoid ape not higher in the zoological scale than a chimpanzee, and that the date at which human-like anthropoid lines first began to diversify, lies near the beginning of the miocene period. On gives man the respectable antiquity of about one million years.

"Our geological search, which I have summarized all to briefly, has not produced so far the final and conclusive evidence of man's anthropoid origin; we have not found, as yet the human 'image' emerging from its anthropoid encasement.

Praises Darwin
"The crucial chapters in Darwin's 'Descent of Man' are those in which he seeks to give a historical account of the rise of man's brain and of the varied functions which that organ subserves. Darwin himself approached this problem not as an anatomist, but as a psychologist and, after many years of patient and exact observation, succeeded in convincing himself that, immeasurable as are the differences between the mentality of man and ape, they are of degree, not of kind. Prolonged researches made by modern psychologists have but verified and extended Darwin's conclusion. No matter what line of evidence we select to follow—evidence gathered by anatomists, by embryologists, by physiologists or by psychologists—we reach the conviction that man's brain has been evolved from that of an anthropoid ape and that in the process no new structure has been introduced and no new or strange faculty interpolated.

"Was Darwin right when he said that man, under the action of biological forces which can be observed and measured, has been raised from a place among anthropoid apes to that which he now occupies? The answer is, 'Yes! And in returning this verdict I speak both as forerunner of the jury—a jury which has been impaneled from men who have devoted a lifetime to weighing the evidence.'"

CAPTURED AVIATORS NOW SAFE IN TEXAS
Reynolds and Newland Reach Presidio; Plane Retained by Mexicans

SAN ANTONIO, TEXAS, AUG. 31.—(AP)—Captain C. H. Reynolds and Master Sergeant Gus Newland, army aviators, who were forced to earth south of the Rio Grande Saturday, reached Presidio, Texas, today, according to advices received from Camp Marfa and Presidio today. The news of their location came only after Fort Sam Houston here had dispatched two flyers in Douglas transport planes to scour the border from Del Rio, Texas, to Tucson, Arizona, in an effort to locate the men. News of their arrival at Presidio came from Colonel C. S. Babcock, commandant of the First cavalry at Marfa.

Colonel Babcock wired that the men were safe and that their plane was 30 miles up the Rio Grande from Presidio, awaiting a release from Mexico City. Mexican soldiers, Colonel Babcock said, were guarding the plane and were prepared to clear a runway for it as soon as the release is received and minor repairs are made.

Advices from Mexico City said that the men were not prisoners and that they had not been injured, but the continued silence of the flyers themselves led staff officers here to worry about them and fear that they might be down in some deserted portion of the border.

The flyers who are searching for them were expected to reach Marfa this afternoon from where one of them may go to Mexico to help start Reynolds' plane.

State Senator Becomes Candidate in Race for Congress

PORTLAND, Aug. 31.—(AP)—Gus C. Moser, state senator for 15 years, announced today that he is a candidate for the endorsement of the republican congressional convention and will abide by the will of that gathering. John A. Meers, a district court judge, also issued an announcement of his candidacy tonight and will abide by the result.

Other republicans who have announced themselves and will enter the convention are Frank L. Shull, L. E. Stansie, Franklin E. Kroll, Jacob Kastler and Mrs. W. H.

TEMPERANCE UNION CLOSURES CONVENTION
Activities Crystallize Into Opposition to Al Smith as Candidate

MINNEAPOLIS, Aug. 31.—(AP)—After welcoming to its cause an organization, credited on the floor with having kept Governor Al Smith out of the White House, the National Women's Christian Temperance Union concluded its annual convention here tonight with pledges renewing loyalty to prohibition and law enforcement.

Seven days of activity, centering around plans for relentless warfare against "wet" candidates, were climaxed by repeated reference to the proposed presidential candidacy of Governor Smith.

Started by a delegate from the governor's own home state, the wave of opposition to his candidacy swept through the convention hall during the day session and was kept alive by the same woman at the final convention banquet tonight.

Reading of a telegram from the National Women's Democratic Law Enforcement League, endorsing the union's demand for "bone dry" platforms and candidates, drew from Mrs. D. Leigh Colvin of New York City, the statement that "This means the defeat of Al Smith from the inside of the democratic party."

Amid a mild demonstration, Mrs. Colvin, who is president of the New York state W. C. T. U., continued with the assertion that "This law enforcement league is the same group of women that kept Al Smith from being nominated for president at the last democratic national convention."

"And," she shrieked, "they are going to repeat again next year."

Mrs. Colvin, in an address tonight describing work in her district of New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania, said: "We serve notice on the liquor forces of these three states that the dry forces are in the majority and that no wet governor from the state of New York or from any other state shall sit in the White House as president."

BOLE VICTORS BACK
Art Goebel and William Davis Arrives Frisco

SAN FRANCISCO, AUG. 31.—(AP)—Triumph and sorrow were mingled today in the home coming today of Art Goebel and William Davis, pilot and navigator of the winning Dole air race monoplane, Woolarc.

Goebel and Davis were triumphant in that they won the $25,000 first prize offered in the race. They suppressed their elation because they grieved with the rest of the nation over the loss of six men and one woman entered in the derby.

"All the way home I studied the sea," Goebel said after he and Davis were greeted at the pier by civic representatives. "I fear those fliers are gone. There remains a slim chance—only a mighty slim chance—that any of them will ever be found alive."

Goebel and Davis requested that there be no banquets or other social affairs given for them, saying that such would not be in keeping with their spirits.

MANY W. U. STUDENTS WILL NOT RETURN THIS TERM

Money is tight and many Willamette university students are planning to drop out of school for a year, according to university officials. Enrollment in the freshman class is expected to fill the ranks of those who do not return. As in the past, registration will be limited to approximately 500 students. Applications are coming in steadily.

Freshmen will be required to register during the period September 16 to 20, one week earlier than registration for upper classes. The change was made this year for the purpose of giving underclassmen an opportunity to become acquainted with the university, the professors, and with each other, prior to the advent of the entire student body. Inspiration talks by President Dobby, and the qualifying examinations are to feature activities of the week.

If the plan proves successful, it will be adopted as a regular feature of the university registration requirements.

Instruction for all students will commence Thursday, September 22, at 7:45 a. m.
