general public, was substantially filled. The lower floor was reserved exclusively for the delegates, numbering about 450. The delegates were precinct committee men of the republican county committee and were elected in 1922.

An opinion was given some time ago by the Attorney General I. H. Van Winkle, declaring that congressional committees have the authority to make a nomination in this situation, inasmuch as no provision is made by law for holding the usual primary.

Cheers Sweep Crowd
A wave of cheers swept over the convention as the pool of the first ballot revealed Korell to have 169 votes, only 15 short of the total 184 necessary to nominate.

Frank L. Shull was runner-up with 70 votes and Jacob Kangelier third with 49 votes.

While Korell had been expected to be a formidable candidate, his early strength astounded the supporters of his chief rivals for the nomination.

GET INTO RACE NOW SAYS CONTEST MAN

Time Doesn't Always Mean Money, But Can With Statesman's Offer

(By Radio Contest Editor.)

The race for the many valuable prizes has just begun. No one has really started in earnest as yet. It is everybody's race. Why not enter yourself or the name of a friend and take home one of the valuable prizes offered by the Statesman. Who wouldn't want one of them?

Ask your friends to save all their coupons for you. They all count towards winning one of the prizes.

The old expression "Time is Money," can be proven to everyone's satisfaction by stopping to consider the advantages now placed before every boy and girl in the city of Salem and the surrounding country. The fact that in most cases time is not money should bring more boys and girls to realize that "time could be made into money" by entering the Statesman's big radio-bicycle voting contest and winning one of these splendid prizes.

Trego radio, value $175; is the first grand prize; second, Trego radio, value $170; third, Trego radio, value $165; fourth, Iroquois motor bicycle, value $60; fifth, Iroquois motor bicycle, value $60; and other prizes, 20 in all.

The winning of the first prize in the contest would be well worth any boy's or girl's spare moments. Who doesn't want a radio or bicycle nowadays anyway?

The summing up of this great big juvenile contest is that your "time can be money" to you if you only take notice of your opportunity and make the most of it. By entering this contest your time will be money in every sense of the word.

What are you going to do about it? Will you be the laggard and let some one else win these prizes which mean money in each case? Will you have it said of you by your friends that "he merely works; he does not really do things?"

If that is as far as you can see, why, you will not have taken interest in this big campaign, otherwise you will have been out among your friends telling them of the wonderful opportunities that are now presented to you; that you intend to take advantage of them, and that you intend to make your time mean something to you; that you will not be wasteful of your time, and that at the end of the contest when the counting of votes has been started by Salem's business men, you will be able to say that you have done your best and that your time, which means money to you, has not been wasted.

Take this idea to yourself and then go ahead. Are you going to make a try?

PEOPLE AT NORMAL PRODUCE OWN PLAY

"The Country School" Written, Directed and Enacted by Students

OREGON NORMAL SCHOOL, Monmouth, Sept. 2.—(Special.)—

More than three hundred dollars were turned into the student union-library building fund at the Oregon Normal school at Monmouth as proceeds from the sale of tickets for the play "The Country School" which was given in the normal auditorium Tuesday night.

Aside from the financial aspect the play was an entire success and was given before an enthusiastic audience, which included many Portland and Salem people.

The play was the outcome of a class project worked out in connection with a summer course under Thomas H. Gentle in the normal training department. It was a dramatization of a play, written and directed entirely by the class and was written by Julia A. Spooner, Ruth Oliver and Christine Campbell and was directed by Lorine Gingrich.

The play was centered about the board meeting and the country school at "Punkin Center," topics which afforded ample display of talent and amusing incidents. Due to the choice of a professionally trained teacher the school board raised their district from among the poorer equipped districts to the top of the list.

Lewis Reece as E. Z. Dribble, school clerk, was one of the outstanding characters in the play and portrayed the part of a country school official in a most mirth provoking manner. Addie Crow as his wife played the part of a self-appointed dictator to the school board in a very clever fashion and in her official position was able to accomplish more than the one woman on the board whose vote was systematically overruled.

The part of the woman member was taken by Florence Snodgrass and she played the part of the only progressive member with a display of much talent. Harold Newman as chairman of the board quite convinced the audience that gentlemen prefer blondes when he insisted on paying the new teacher two dollars and four bits more per month on the strength of her blue eyes and a dimple or two.

Earl Stewart's portrayal of "Slubby," the moron school boy was so true to the part of a sub-normal child as to be almost gruesome, although he brought down more laughs than any other character.

Other members of the cast who did creditable work and deserve special mention in making the play the entire success it was were: Virgil Reece, Kenneth Horn, Carl Morris, Violet Hukari, Alma Smith, Roy Guicksall, Harry Sladen, Edrieda Holzenangel, Elmo Russell, Grace Anderson, Jessie Royal, Vivian Hagen, Helen Laird, and those who took the parts of the school children.

The putting on of this play required the services of a large number of normal students and credit is due all of these in a large measure. It would be a difficult task to select those upon whom the greatest responsibility for its success fell. Prominent among those who took the lead in this project were Julia Spooner and Grace Bridges of Portland. It was largely due to the initiative and creative ability of these two remarkable women that the class was inspired to do this piece of work.

The producing staff consisted of Grace Bridges, general chairman, Christine Campbell, Julia A. Spooner, and Ruth Oliver, the playwrights; Genevieve Anderson, publicity; Grace Bennett and Grace Riley, posters; Bernice Engsbretsen and Marion Ladd, tickets; Lorine Gingrich, stage manager; Leon Blankenship, stage manager; Edwin Condit, assistant stage manager; Gerda Anderson, property manager and May Stratton, costume manager.

The most noteworthy feature of this play was the fact that the idea was conceived, the play written and produced within a short space of three and one-half weeks and yet it was presented and concluded to be a highly finished piece of work.

LAWYERS WANT AIR FLIGHTS REGULATED

American Bar Association Passes Resolution at Annual Convention

BUFFALO, N. Y., Sept. 2.—

(AP)—A movement aimed at the regulation of trans-oceanic flights to prevent loss of lives in unworkable planes was launched today at the final business meeting of the American Bar association's 56th annual convention.

The movement took the form of a resolution unanimously adopted that pledged the association's members to urge congress to pass legislation extending the powers of the secretary of commerce to include regulation of such flights.

The resolution was introduced by Chester W. Cuthell, New York, chairman of the association's air law committee, general counsel of the National Air Transport company and the Curtis Airplane company. In an explanation of the resolution and the air law committee's report, Mr. Cuthell said:

"During the recent trans-oceanic flights, 25 lives have been lost. Most of these flights were not of a strictly commercial nature; the profession calls them 'stunt' flights. Our commercial aviation law was passed to regulate commercial enterprises, and, therefore, is not broad enough to give the secretary of commerce the right to regulate, and in some cases of preventing such flights."
