Disagree With Borah

Change in Interstate Compact Could not be Changed

SPOKANE, Sept. 14.—(AP)—Consent of Idaho would be necessary for modification of any compact between that state and Washington for division of the head waters of the Columbia river, it is declared in a statement by five attorneys comprising the legal committee of the Columbia basin irrigation league and made public at the offices of the league here.

The statement was occasioned by a declaration attributed to United States Senator W. E. Borah of Idaho, at Sand Point, Ida., recently, to the effect that after a compact is entered into, Washington could demand and obtain additional storage waters for the Columbia basin project.

It discusses the legal phases of the question at some length and cites court decisions to disprove the senator's purported statement.
