

Square Houses are Always Economical to Build

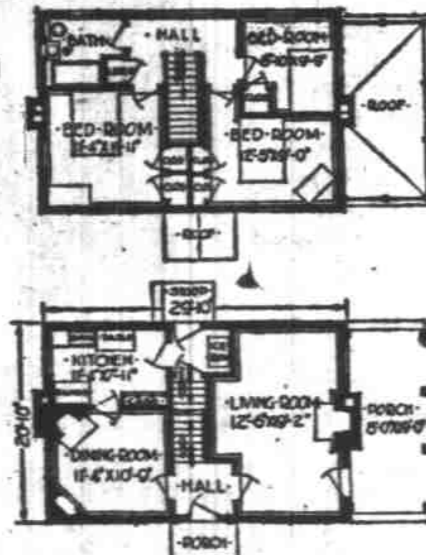

THE YUTAN—DESIGN A616

ARCHITECTURALLY the square and rectangular houses do not rank as high as some others of the more artistic types but they always have the saving grace of walls and ceilings that are unbroken and rooms that do not give one that cramped feeling. Moreover, what is frequently more important in this day of higher building costs, they are the most economical of construction. Plain walls and plain roofs are also less liable to develop defects in workmanship than when they are cut up in intricate angles which make tight joints difficult.

Simplicity marks this home both in its exterior appearance and its interior arrangement. Its walls are of common brick laid up in a simple running bond and the window sills have the brick laid on edge. The only touch of ornament is in the chimney tops. The rather impressive doorway affords just the needed measure of relief.

Entrance from the front porch is into a square hallway from which the stairs lead to the upper floor. To the right is the living room, extending entirely across the house with a cheery open grate and a door opening upon the living porch at the end. The dining room, opposite, also has an open grate and a built-in china closet. Off the large kitchen is the basement stairway on the landing of which is the refrigerator.

The upper floor provides three bedrooms and the bath. Two of these rooms are supplied with double closets and each has windows on two sides insuring light, ventilation and cheerfulness always. The bath is amply large and well lighted also. There is no attic but the basement is sufficiently large for all storage needs. When one takes into consideration all the conveniences provided this home assumes a decided air of desirability.

The Common Brick Manufacturers' Association, Cleveland, Ohio, can furnish complete drawings for this design. Leaflet on brick construction sent upon request.

COLOR SCIENCE MAY AID PUBLIC HEALTH

Various Hues Have Different Effects on Human System, Say Experts

Choice of colors in building materials may soon be influenced by results of experiments made in London, to determine the effects of various lights upon the human system, it was said today by N. E. Stephens of New York, Secretary of the North American Society of Arts.

Although the tests in London, conducted by Dr. J. Dodson Hesse, noted physician, have to do chiefly with the curative value of certain colors in the treatment of physical and mental ailments, it is contended by Mr. Stephens that the findings will inevitably be applied broadly throughout various spheres of human activity.

"Everyone today recognizes the prevention of illness and the maintenance of general health, to be quite as important as the treatment of sickness after it is contracted," declares Mr. Stephens. "It is quite logical to suppose therefore, that the results of Dr. Hesse's findings as to the effects of colors on the human system, will not be confined entirely to methods of healing.

"Just as sanitation is today considered as important as medicine, we may soon find that the proper use of color in our city-building, will decrease the number of cases requiring the remedial use of color and other curatives.

"Modern building materials, such as terra cotta, afford wide range to the architect, in the selection of colors. Before long, he will have accurate information at his command, to show how each color affects not only the psychology, but the physical system of the person who views it, or who comes into contact with light reflected from its surface.

"Thus far, Dr. Hesse's demonstrations indicate that blue, green and orange have the most powerful influences. Blue is used to reduce inflammatory conditions. Green soothes the nerves, and lowers the blood pressure. Orange and red stimulate the nervous systems. Yellow is a mental stimulant.

"Some of these colors," Dr. Hesse claims, "affect the individual not only through the vision, but by direct contact with the body. He points out, too, that the treatment of disease by color and various forms of light, is not at all new.

"At one time red light was used in the treatment of small-pox. More recently, violet rays and X-rays have come into wide use by the medical profession.

"Naturally the concentration of light for curative purposes gives a more powerful and a speedier effect than the reflection from a terra cotta faced building. But the importance of the latter is not to be ignored. A single whiff of fresh air is not as potent as many drams, yet fresh air plays

Seeing the WORTH WHILE in Oregon

CRATER LAKE NATIONAL PARK

In the crater of an extinct volcano 6,239 feet above sea level, lies Crater Lake. It is six miles across and its walls rise more than 1,000 feet from the water's edge to the rim. Its depth of 2000 feet colors its waters a blue, so deep, that it seems purple.

Crater Lake National Park is reached over an excellent highway 80 miles from Medford, Oregon, on the Pacific Highway or 23 miles from The Dalles-California Highway. Several auto camps and camping spaces are maintained by the National Park Service for the convenience of the tourist.

a vital part in the maintenance of health.

"It is well to realize that the human race was evolved in certain surroundings, containing certain color combinations. Forests, lakes, skies, sunsets, fields, all have their distinctive colorings. These are supplanted or hidden from view by artificial structures, in the city.

"We have learned that where fresh air is shut off, it must be supplied by mechanical ventilation if health is to be preserved. It is not unlikely that we shall also learn that health requires the presence of certain colors.

"It is also possible that the architect will go even further and will use colors to serve the special interests of commerce. Activity may be stimulated, or nervousness and unrest soothed, by the wise use of colors."

Thousands Visit Domremy To Honor Maid of Orleans

DOMREMY, France.—(AP)—This little town, where Joan of Arc was born, is a rival of Lourdes as an objective of Catholic pilgrimage since the sanctification of the Maid of Orleans.

Ever increasing numbers of persons take their troubles to the new saint, and pilgrimages are frequent from countries as far distant as Poland.

When the new basilica was dedicated recently 30,000 people from all parts of Europe made a Christian Mecca of the town. They overflowed the narrow streets and winding roads and filled the fields around the building.

Other towns celebrate the new national fête established in honor of the Maid of Orleans with greater pomp than does Domremy. When the fête day comes, if the stranger asks a Catholic resident of the village what ceremonies are going to take place he may reply, "Vespers and the procession of the basilica." If he asks an official of the republic what is going to happen, he will be told probably, "A speech by monsieur the sub-prefect."

Devout Catholics of this region resent politicians presuming to take possession of their saint and divert the manifestations in her honor from religion. The differences between clerical and anti-clericals, however, has no effect upon the influence Saint Joan exercises over the faithful.

Builds His Own Plane to Fly With Family

MARION, O.—(AP)—Four Marion youngsters are waiting with great impatience while their father, Carl Ferguson, puts the finishing touches on a family airplane which is taking shape in the backyard.

Ferguson, once a motorcycle racer and now employed in a Marion factory, constructed the ship without blueprints and with no expert instruction as to principles of construction. It cost $450, has a 28 horsepower motor, and a wing spread of twenty feet. The fuselage is 16 feet long.

Ferguson has taken the plane up for a few trial flights and soon Mary, Frank, Paul and Jack Ferguson are going to get the thrill they've been waiting for.

Youngster Linguist; Speaks Six Languages

CONSTANTINOPLE.—(AP)—The "internationalism" of this city where east and west meet is typified by Frank Trejhorn, who, at 14, speaks six languages fluently and can get the drift of conversations in half a dozen more. He is British but never saw his own country. His father is English and his mother Yugoslav. He speaks, reads and writes English, French, German, Turkish, Croatian and Greek.

Edwardian Fashions Predicted in England

LONDON.—(AP)—British fashion experts declare that London women of the smart set will be quite Edwardian this winter. Longer skirts, fluffier heads, lace blouses and sharply indicated

English Speaking Police to Be Increased in Paris

PARIS.—(AP)—So successful have been the few Parsian policemen who speak English in aiding travelers that the municipal council has decided to put English speaking officers on duty where tourists appear in any numbers.

A public school, with an original enrollment of nearly fifty, has been organized. It will teach the English usually employed by those asking for aid and direction, and the proper words for a polite and informative reply.
