

Fight Season at Armory Opens Thursday With Tough Men Matched

"WISE ONES" PICK AD MACKIE TO WIN

The "wise ones" in Portland are picking Ad Mackie to take the measure of Phil Bayes, local brawler, in their mix at the armory Thursday night, according to Harry Plant, local promoter.

Plant, himself, feels that Mackie has a little edge on Bayes. Both men are in the pink of condition, but Mackie has had more ring experience, and is anxious to demonstrate to Salem fans that his challenge to Bayes on two previous occasions were not meaningless.

Mackie is in Portland and will not arrive in Salem until Thursday afternoon. He has his own gymnasium in the big city, and has been going through an intensive training to fit himself for the terrific battle he enters against Bayes.

Aside from Ted Fox and Andy Jereg, two young chaps who will appear in the semi-windup, Plant is not yet ready to announce his preliminaries. They will be on hand, however, to make the total card 28 rounds of good boxing.

Matchmaker Plant has made it plain that the fans themselves will decide Thursday night the kind of boxing they want this winter.

He has an impressive program mapped out which can only be carried through with firm support of his patrons. Benny Pels will probably be matched with the winner of the show Thursday night, and from then on the signing of headliners and ring favorites of coast boxing will be a mere formality with Plant, if the followers of the game here want them.

"If the attendance Thursday night is big enough to indicate a real desire on the part of Salem fans to see high class boxing, they will get it. All I have to do is sign the fighters, when I know that the fans want them," Plant declares.

Stanley Frye, local boxing instructor, and one time champion of the Pacific fleet, will serve as referee at the fight, and at succeeding ones this winter. Frye is a thorough student of the game, and noted for his fairness.

Tickets are going rapidly, according to Plant, several blocks being taken by people in towns near Salem.

CARTER BEATS FOLEY
SEATTLE, Sept. 27.—(AP)—Leslie "Wildcat" Carter, Everett featherweight, was awarded a decision for six fast rounds against Vic Foley of Vancouver, B. C., in the main event, of a boxing card here tonight. Carter weighed 129 1/4 while Foley tipped the scales at 124.

Tunney on Arrival in New York Tells How He Did It

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—(AP)—The crisis Gene Tunney expected to face sooner or later in his ring career—coming up from the floor, dazed and wobbling at the count of nine—taught the heavy-weight champion something new about psychology.

On his homecoming today from the Soldier field battleground, Gene told how for several years he had planned to meet the situation that confronted him when Jack Dempsey floored him in the seventh round of the spectacle on the Chicago lake front.

Outside on 42nd street, more than 1,000 fans yelled for a sight of the champion who rose from the resin dust to pound Dempsey into submission for the second time. They had met Tunney as he came into Grand Central station from Cleveland, rushed the guards closed in to shake his hand, and had pursued the big marine thru an underground passage to a hotel lobby and thence to the front of Manager Billy Gibson's offices. Now they wanted a speech.

Situation Studied

Unmindful of the racket outside, Gene sat on the top of the same desk, in the same position in which he greeted friends and scribes after stripping Dempsey of the title at Philadelphia last fall. His mind was full of psychology and the reaction he had planned for the crisis—a reaction that never came.

"Ever since I entered the professional ring in 1919, I have known that sooner or later I must be knocked down. I also knew that when that happened I must get up, come on, and win my fight despite the handicap.

"I had worked out two lines of action. The first was to get up and camouflage my real condition by letting go a right hand punch with everything behind it—including a prayer that it landed. The second was to get up and dive into a clinch, holding on desperately, try to break us, and if necessary to go down again for another nine count from whatever punch came next. If my head was not clear I planned to take still another count and so on until I regained my senses.

Decides to Run Instead

"But when I actually found myself down I realized my plans were foolish. I couldn't gamble with my title. My best chance was to make Dempsey follow me and I thought: 'He can't catch me.'

"Dempsey always has had trouble hitting a man who was going away from him. His greatest successes have been scored against men who carried the fight to him, trying to outslam the master slammer at his own game.

"They say that I ran away from Dempsey. You don't realize that I could have traveled twice as fast if I had wanted and if I had been hurt just a bit more. Instead I regulated my pace, putting on steam when I thought it necessary, and slowing enough to let Jack catch up whenever I thought he would come close enough for a stiff counter wallop.

"My head was clearer right then than at any moment from the time I reached Chicago three weeks earlier. All the cobwebs left in my brain by the heat of Lake Villa and the excitement of the day, were swept away by that series of punches to the head in the seventh round.

Jack's Attack Stopped

"Those counters slowed Dempsey up even in the seventh. Two in particular I remember, both solid smashes to the chin. As they landed I could almost see Dempsey losing his advantage and thinking to himself: 'I'd better watch out myself or this fellow will knock me out.'

"Then he beckoned 'Come on and fight,' admitting his own inability to control the situation. It certainly was gratifying to think that again I was master even though I had been on the floor only seconds before."

Gene smiled at the recollection and then explained how the first principles of "situation mastery" had been pounded into him by one of his early fistie tutors.

"I've forgotten his name," Gene said, "but his teaching was this: 'If you can be master of every situation even when you are being licked, you'll be great. Know when to box, when to slug, when to protect yourself at all costs, and then box enough and slug enough to keep things under control even when you are being outboxed and outslugged.'

"Floor Comfortable"

Tunney said he was startled in viewing the motion pictures of the fight to realize that Dempsey landed six smashes on his chin before the crash in the seventh round. Gene said he felt the first three only and that his first impression as his brain cleared was: "Gosh, but this floor is comfortable."

Referring to the "long count" controversy, Gene said the referee warned both him and Dempsey on the knockdown rules just before the first bell.

"The referee, Dave Barry, called me both 'Boys,'" Tunney said, "and the last thing he said to us was: 'In case either of you boys score a knockdown, the boy who does goes immediately to a neutral corner or I won't count.'

DEMPSEY READY FOR ANOTHER GO

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—(AP)—Jack Dempsey came out tonight with a flat denial of Gene Tunney's claim regarding final instructions from Referee Dave Barry in the championship bout at Chicago.

"I received no warning or instruction about retreating to a neutral corner in the event of a knockdown," Dempsey told newspapermen. "I feel that I lost the decision through the fault of a referee who was not favorable to me. I knocked Tunney out and I can do it again. I want another match with him and I'm going to do my best to get it."

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—(AP)—Jack Dempsey came to New York looking for a fight. Far from being through with the ring, after his second losing battle with Tunney, Jack expects to go gunning for the title he lost a year ago and failed to lift last week. The method of his procedure he did not care to divulge, but he was emphatic in declaring himself ready for anybody.

"I'll take on Tunney, sure, or anybody else," he said.

Asked if he would fight for Tex Rickard, the former champion said he stood ready to do business with him or any other promoter who had anything attractive to offer.

Jack was in good spirits when called from his hotel suite. The only apparent mark of the Tunney battle was a cut over one eye, but it had almost healed.

"I have two fights under my belt and I'm ready to get started," Dempsey told newspapermen.

"When do you expect to fight?"

"Anytime, anywhere."

"Would you fight Tunney right away?"

"Sure—almost right away."

Dempsey said the measures being taken to retrieve the decision in the Tunney fight were entirely in the hands of Leo P. Flynn, his manager.
