

SPLENDORS OF THE STAGE-SCREEN

Elsinore Theater
You have all heard the "doll dance," and you've all seen doll dances, but wait till you see and hear Fanchon & Marco's gaudy "Dolls," which is on its way to Salem and will be on the stage at the West Coast Elsinore theater tomorrow and Monday.

The producers of West Coast theaters presentations have gone out into the open market, which in things of this kind, extends clear around the world, and they have gotten together one of the greatest aggregations of human dolls, ever seen in Salem.

There are rag dolls, soldier dolls, dog dolls, saw-dust dolls (remember the song about the doll that had a pain in her saw-dust?) in red-headed dolls, blonde dolls (for the gentlemen who are said to prefer them) and brunette dolls (the brunettes say that gentlemen may prefer blondes but they marry brunettes)—and more dolls for everybody.

Christie and Daley, introduce new things in pantomime dolls and their dances, that are popular in Europe, and the Andrieff Trio, direct from Moscow, with new and different kinds of dolls that you have never seen before.

There are the Sunkist Beauties, too, in the presentation, that no one in Salem wants to miss. This show will be presented in conjunction with the feature picture "Becky" starring Sally O'Neill, Owen Moore and Gertrude Olinstead—starting tomorrow.

Grand Theater
Though Mother has been the theme of many a great screen story, "Dad" has been comparatively neglected. He gets his inning, however, in Warner Bros. production of "What Happened to Father," directed by John G. Adair.

This delightful film at last brings the much slighted father of the family into his own. Warner Oland, who has won an enviable position on the screen as a character actor, is seen at the beginning of the picture in the guise of a rather absent-minded old fellow, of that carpet-slipper, alpaca-coat variety which is fast vanishing from all but the odd corners of the world.

One would not exactly say that he is henpecked, but in his easy-going way he allows mother, who is a bit domineering, to order his life. He has a hobby which he dares not divulge to the family, namely, the writing of musical comedy revues, using a pen-name which has become famous on Broadway.

One day in the confusion of his daughter's wedding preparations, he slips away to a dress rehearsal in response to an urgent telegram. No sooner does he get back stage than things begin to happen, more interesting things than had ever happened in his life before!

Fiabelle Fairbanks, William Demarest, Vera Lewis, John Miljan, Cathleen Calhoun, Hugh Allan, and Jean Lefferty are the other members of the all-star cast of "What Happened to Father," which comes to the Grand Theater next Saturday and Sunday.

Hollywood Theater
Filled with the romance and drama of Russia after the fall of the Czar, "The Volga Boatman," Cecil B. De Mille's second independent production for Producers Distributing Corporation release, strikes out into an hitherto unexplored vein of strongly entertaining photoplay background. The great song, "The Volga Boatman" served as the inspiration for the story which Konrad Bercovici wrote for the screen. Leonore J. Coffey made the film adaptation.

Scene—Laid in Russia
The tale is laid in Russia at the time of the outbreak of strife between the Red Army and the White Army of the aristocrats. The dramatic interest centers in the contacts between Ellnor Fair, a lovely aristocrat, and William Boyd, a sweat-stained, toll-laden boatman of the Volga. Theodore Kosloff plays a striking dumb blacksmith, Victor Varconi, an imperious prince and Julia Payne, an exotic Tartar character. Robert Edison is given one of his interesting character roles, as the last of a great line of Russian land owners.

The story starts on the Volga, before the Revolution, and then swings into its stride when the overturning of the Czar makes the whole nation a seething cauldron.

HAPPY HOME RUINED

DIVORCE SOUGHT BECAUSE OF HOME BREW MAKING

Alleging that his wife, whom he married six months ago, insists upon manufacturing and drinking home brew in their home, and that when he objected she told him she had lost her affection for him, and that her actions constitute cruel and inhuman treatment, D. W. Shafer yesterday began in circuit court a suit for divorce from Mattie Shafer.

The couple were married in Portland on March 15, 1927. Shafer's complaint alleges in part "that defendant insisted plaintiff allow her, in the home of plaintiff and defendant, not only to manufacture but drink all the alcoholic beverages otherwise known as 'home brew' that she wanted and whenever she wanted.

Mr. Shafer, the plaintiff, protested vigorously, his complaint indicates, but to no effect. He told her, he claims, that the manufacture of home brew is illegal and might lead to serious difficulties with officers of the law. Thereupon, he says, his wife decided to leave him, indicating that his attitude caused her no longer to care for him.

Collision of Big Steamer Investigated at Portland

PORTLAND, Sept. 30.—(AP)—Continuing an investigation into the collision of the steamer Ernest H. Meyer with a fishing boat in the estuary of the Columbia River in the latter part of August, a hearing is to be held at Astoria at 2 p. m. October 7, it was announced today. Testimony of witnesses will be heard by Inspectors Edhofer and Wynn of the United States steam vessel inspection service. The inspectors have resumed their duties here after their annual leave. Captain John K. Baizer, supervising inspector of the first district, who relieved them, has returned to his San Francisco headquarters.

Most of the world's emeralds come from Columbia, South America, according to an answered question in Liberty.

YOUTH, 17, KILLS SELF

Fifth Suicide Attempt Made Successfully by Leonard Ero

ASTORIA, Sept. 30.—(AP)—Leonard Ero, 17, of Dahlia, Washington, an isolated community on the north shore of the Columbia river, committed suicide by shooting himself with a rifle Wednesday night, a coroner's jury at Cathlamet decided tonight. The coroner's jury had been assembled by George F. Hannigan, prosecuting attorney of Wahkiakum county.

Ero shot himself in the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Ero, Wednesday night. Evidence brought out at the inquest tonight showed that he had attempted suicide by drowning four times previously.

Early reports of the shooting containing intimations of foul play involving a brother of young Ero were proved entirely false at the inquest.

SALMON EXTERMINATED

Fish Found Dying Out Rapidly in Klamath River, Report

YREKA, Cal., Sept. 30.—This year's run of the Klamath river salmon is threatened with extermination. George A. Coleman, state biologist and fish and game commissioner, W. Lippencott of Yreka declared today after having inspected several dead salmon found in the river.

Lippencott reported that the great number of dead and dying fish found from Orleans bar to the state fish trap above Hornbrook showed gill infection which caused strangulation. Outside of the gill trouble the fish were of good color and flesh.

Drastic measures are planned to save the fish. The majority of Siskiyou county residents depend on the salmon catch for their living.

Champ Log Roller

Wilbur Marx, 16-year-old Eau Claire, Wis., high school boy, winner of the world's log rolling championship with some of his trophies. The big cup is emblematic of the world's title.

WILLOS REPRIEVED AGAIN

Carrying out his announced intention of preventing the execution of James Willos until the fate of Ellsworth Kelley, sentenced to die for the same crime, is settled, Governor Patterson Friday extended Willos' reprieve for 30 days more.

Both had been sentenced to hang August 19 for the slaying of Milton Holman and John Sweetney, prison guards, at the break here two years ago; but Kelley was saved temporarily by a petition for a writ of habeas corpus which is now awaiting hearing on appeal in the state supreme court, and Willos was reprieved pending the result of this case.

PLANE CRASHES, EUGENE

EUGENE, Sept. 30.—(AP)—A biplane built at Long Beach, Cal., by the International Aircraft corporation, carrying E. J. La Due and L. S. McClain was wrecked here today when it overshot the local airport and crashed through a fence separating the airport from a field. Neither flier was injured.

The pair were on their way south to the California city from Portland and attempted to land here. They did not see the fence and took to the ground too near it to stop. The landing gear was badly damaged and one wing was bent when the ship turned over on its side.

There were 2,400 military engagements in the Civil War considered important enough to be identified by name, according to an answered question in Liberty.

One of the most popular of the military offerings of the season is a helmet entirely covered with velvet petals.
