GIANT GUNS ROAR IN DEMONSTRATION

10,000 Ordnance Men Present as Firing Demonstration at Meeting

ABERDEEN PROVING GROUND, Md., Oct. 6. (AP).—Thousands of American citizens and manufacturers watched the army demonstrate its modern weapons which they will be called upon to construct and man in time of war.

They were members of the army ordnance association—active and reserve officers, heads of machine manufacturing companies and civilians interested in American preparedness. Ten thousand of them came for their ninth annual meeting here to see the war equipment.

Powder smoke covered this reservation of 35,000 acres throughout the day and into the night. Guns more powerful than those used in the World war belched fire. Onlookers continually held their ears. A battle was being staged but the muzzles of the huge weapons were directed into the waters of the Chesapeake or upon the open spaces of the reservation.

Dwight Davis, secretary of war, and Curtis D. Wilbur, secretary of the navy, witnessed the demonstration conducted by nine branches of the army. These officials and John R. Sargent, United States attorney general, Hanford MacNider, assistant secretary of war, T. R. Robinson, assistant secretary of the navy and other staff officers of the army and navy flanked the sidelines.

The roar of the guns, the zip-zip of the machine guns and the blast of bombs released from airplanes made these directors of the nation's defense realize they would be targets if the guns were in possession of the enemy.

The "main front" of the reservation was in action and the reports of the guns echoed throughout this country settlement about 10 miles from Baltimore. The demonstrations followed in quick succession and when the program changed from the "main front" to the aviation field, some miles distant, special railroad cars carried the visitors.

The most spectacular feature of the exhibition was the firing of anti-aircraft guns which brought down targets—inflated cloth bags—towed by airplanes at an altitude of two miles. The guns were equipped with instruments which detected the position of the moving airplanes by sound waves. A 16-inch coastal defense gun, which, from its position here, could destroy Baltimore city within a short time, displayed its power by hurling its projectile 30 miles down the Chesapeake to Love Point on Maryland's eastern shore.

A good buy. 57 acres about five miles out, paved road all the way, all under cultivation, good Cherry or Walnut land, good location, good spring on place, $90 per acre, easy terms. F. L. Wood. Geo. F. Reed 341 State St.

Army officials claim that this new model of the weapon, though not equal to the range of Germany's so-called "Big Bertha" used in the World war, is more powerful and destructive than the German gun which started the world ten years ago.

Warlike maneuvering of the various branches of the service was vividly portrayed in detail. Tractors and tanks of every description and weight participated in a sham attack upon an "enemy" stronghold.

Aviators must be good poker players because with those guys, the sky's the limit.
