MARRIAGE QUESTION UP

Rabbi Newman and Judge Lindsey Discuss Issues Before Large Crowd at Portland Public Auditorium

PORTLAND, Oct. 22.—(AP)—A sociologist and a sociologically minded clergyman, men agreeing on ideas which many regard as liberal or radical or dangerous, debated companionate marriage before a capacity audience at the public auditorium here tonight.

Rabbi Louis L. Newman of a Franco and Judge Ben B. Lindsey of Denver were the debaters. Crowd Not Affected. That audience has not been considerably swayed toward one viewpoint or the other was indicated by tallying the opinions of a few interviewed as they left the building.

Rabbi Newman agreed unquestionably with Judge Lindsey that strict control is desirable and need somewhat less definitely at divorce by mutual consent could be a good thing for society.

He disagreed decidedly with Judge Lindsey on the third proposal of companionate marriage: that the contracting parties could have no financial obligation toward each other if a divorce takes place. He spoke of the proposal as "a masculine device to free men from alimony if divorce occurs."

LOCKWOOD TRIAL WILL OPEN HERE MONDAY

The trial is expected to consume three days' time. That a denial of the contention of drunkenness will be made by the defense appears probable. However, Mrs. Lockwood's attorneys having indicated this much when they filed affidavits in connection with a motion for postponement of the trial two weeks ago. The affidavits were to the effect that at least two possible witnesses will be able to testify at Mrs. Lockwood had had nothing to drink before she began her trial drive east on State street.

The trial is expected to consume three days' time.

SIDELIGHTS OF THE STAGE AND SCREEN

Oregon Theater. A perfect example of modern photoplay comedy is now showing at the Oregon theater, where Paramount's "Tell It To Sweeney" is being screened. This picture, a comedy of railroad life as it shouldn't be, presents a new team of farceurs, Chester Conklin and George Bancroft, who seem to be congenially cast as partners in the business of manufacturing chuckles.

Cut-and-dried ideas are conspicuously absent from "Tell It To Sweeney." The picture brings one roar after another because of this pair of comedians who are so long experienced in the comedy field.

The story, the work of Percy Heath, Monte Brice and Kerry Clarke, centers about a haughty old engineer and his old-fashioned steed of the thundering rails, both relics of a bygone era and another engineer of the modern day. Of course, there is romance, plenty of it, and this romance serves to bring about a series of spectacular thrills in which a runaway train plays the principal part. Conklin has the role of Luke Beamish, the out-of-date throttle-pusher while Bancroft is well suited to the part of Cannonball Casey, the Herculean operator of the crack flier.

Beamish's daughter, Doris Hill, the fiancée of Jack Sweeney, son of the railroad's owner, meets Cannonball, who immediately falls in love with her. Then the trouble starts. Luke Beamish opposes the suit, by virtue of Cannonball's air of disdain at the ancient locomotive, the pride of Luke's heart. Cannonball tries to bully Luke, who vanquishes him in an amusing wrestling match.

There's a lot of things in the picture to hold the interest of the lover of dramatics, and at the same time the comedy relief is apparent every moment. Gregory LaCava, remembered for many of Richard Dix' most successful pictures, did a good job at directing "Tell It To Sweeney."

MARONI OLSEN WILL BRING FINE PLAYS

Opening Production Scheduled for November 17; Sponsored By Lewis

"Theatrical entertainment for the intelligent minded" might readily apply to the Moroni Olsen Players.

"Intelligent plays, intelligent producing plays, intelligent acting, and finally, and equally essential, intelligent business management" reads their record.

For four years the Moroni Olsen Players have labored and learned. Now they have been graduated. The diploma of public approval and support is in their hands.

Once regarded somewhat skeptically as an interesting experiment savoring of "little theater," the First Circuit Repertory Company of the Moroni Olsen Players has become an essential part of the cultural and educational life of the West. In all that vast territory between the Rocky Mountains and the Coast comprising Washington, Oregon, Montana, Idaho, Utah and Wyoming, there is not a town of importance today that does not guarantee them, in advance, an audience for at least two plays a year.

California and Canada, too, are on their schedule for next spring. Pluck, endurance, intelligence, and artistic merit have earned their rich reward.

"Like a flock of birds flying straight toward the sun together" reads an appreciation of their acting in the August issue of the Theater Magazine. Vachell Lindsey said this. What could more perfectly visualize Beauty and Intelligence?

"Completely balanced," without the star system, "no headliners." In a few words he has caught the secret of their success. The first play to be presented by the Moroni Olsen Players this season is "The Lilies of the Field" by John Hastings Turner.

This will be given at the Capital theater November 17th and sponsored by the Salem Lions Club.
