SENATORS AWAIT McNARY'S ARRIVAL

Farm Relief Legislation Deadlocked Pending Arrival of Oregon Man

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—(AP)—Deadlocked on details of farm relief legislation which they plan to press toward enactment western republican senators are centering their hopes now on Senator McNary, of Oregon, new chairman of the agriculture committee.

Senator McNary, co-author of the McNary-Haugen bill which President Coolidge vetoed, has been studying the farming situation during the summer with a view to perfecting legislation.

The opponents of the vetoed measure are awaiting his return in the hope of finding in him the author of a bill which they can support.

Differences of opinion on the McNary-Haugen bill have cropped up in the newly organized group of western independent republican senators. Senator Borah, of Idaho, is one of those opposed to the bill, which would have sought to aid the farmer by caring for crop surpluses.

The study being given agriculture by the administration, it has been learned, has gone into other fields than the surplus crop problem. It is understood that President Coolidge is interested in proposals which would put under federal license all commission houses dealing in farming commodities.

This program has proceeded to the point where the department of justice is investigating the feasibility of such licenses. Likewise, Senator Borah is understood to be interested in it. The president has been represented as feeling that farmers would gain considerable benefit from such a program which would make the commission houses liable to government inspection.

thing else that happened on the fatal night in question. It is anticipated that this will be one of the points argued by the defense to the jury tomorrow, the idea being that witnesses so busy on everything else might easily be mistaken on points connected with the death of Sawyer.

The state sprung a surprise on the defense when it introduced Carl B. Gillis, traveling salesman, as one of the state witnesses yesterday morning. Counsel for Mrs. Lockwood had declared that Gillis would testify on her side, his having been with her at the Marion hotel shortly before the accident took place. They expected him to declare that she had had nothing to drink and was not under the influence of liquor at the time.

Placed on the witness stand by the state, however, Gillis with apparent unwillingness admitted that there had been liquor served at dinner on the evening of July 19. He would not say that Mrs. Lockwood became drunk.

Whether Gillis will now be put on the stand by the defense is considered doubtful.

It is understood that the other person claimed to be a star witness for the defense, a man named Van Courtland, will not be available for the trial despite efforts made to bring him here from Los Angeles. Just what line of defense Mrs. Lockwood's counsel has to rely upon is a matter of considerable speculation.

Among other star witnesses for the state yesterday were Kenneth Perry, local pharmacist who was an eye witness to the accident, and Max Alford, state traffic officer who pursued Mrs. Lockwood up State street after the accident took place. Perry was recalled from a honeymoon trip to British Columbia in order to be present for the trial.

The courtroom has been packed Monday and Tuesday, with many standing against the walls at the sides and rear and a considerable number unable to get in at all.

Alford testified that at the time of Mrs. Lockwood's arrest, a few minutes after the accident, there was a strong odor of liquor on her breath and two pint bottles of moonshine whiskey were found in her car.

Upon further examination Alford produced two full bottles which he said were the bottles confiscated on the night in question. The bottles were admitted in evidence over strenuous objection by the defense, and identified by Alford as "moonshine whiskey."

There are seven more witnesses at the disposal of the state who will be put on the stand this morning. It was declared last night by District Attorney Carson, it is understood that the first of the seven will be George Edwards, city police officer, who with State Traffic Officer Alford arrested Mrs. Lockwood on the night of the accident.

Another star witness that the state still has in reserve is Dr. Vernon Douglas, deputy county health officer, who examined Mrs. Lockwood a few minutes after she was lodged in the city jail and pronounced her intoxicated.
