Games Next Week-end
 At Tacoma—Whitman vs. College of Puget Sound.
 At Salem—Willamette vs. Pacific.
 At Portland—Linfield vs. Columbia.
 At Caldwell—College of Idaho vs. Pocatello Tech.

Standings in the northwest conference race were unchanged over the week end, and College of Idaho still leads the circuit drive with three victories and no defeats. The only game which could have affected the percentage table was the annual Linfield-Pacetic clash and that ended in a scoreless tie.

Linfield appeared to have a little edge on the Badgers, driving down the muddy field twice to threaten the Pacific goal, only to see the ball on fumbles. The game was a feature of Linfield's homecoming celebration and was witnessed by a large crowd.

Whitman achieved what only Willamette has heretofore been able to do—scored on University of Washington. While the Huskies rode rough-shod over the light missionaries, a well-executed pass, Nickelson to Eckert, gave the men from Walla Walla, a touchdown in the third quarter, after a Washington fumble.

The final score was 61 to 7, and Coach Bagshaw of the Huskies used a number of his second string men throughout.

The Columbia Cliffdwellers came mighty near handing Clyde Hubbard's Loggers a kicking at Portland. Puget Sound put over a touchdown early in the game and from then on had a difficult time holding the Portland team. One of the cliffdwellers picked up a rolling punt on the 47 yard line and sprinted for a touchdown, only to have it ruled out by the referee who said the player had stepped outside.

Willamette played the Chemawa Indians to a six to six tie score. The Bears missed the services of French, elusive halfback.

College of Idaho rested over the week end, but will angle next Saturday with Pocatello Tech. The Coyotes are expected to win easily.

The important conference game next Saturday will be between Whitman and College of Puget Sound. Comparative scores indicate that the two teams are even in ability, with the edge if any in favor of the missionaries, who have already defeated Pacific and Linfield. The game will mean the elimination of one of these teams from the title race.

The clash holding greater interest here, however, is that between Willamette and Pacific on Sweetland field. Since about 1920, these two schools have been rivals, and the competition between them has increased in spirit with the passing of time.

Linfield will play Columbia university in Portland.

TWO SALEMITES ON HAGER SQUAD

OREGON STATE COLLEGE, Oct. 31.—(Special)—John Drager of Salem, senior in commerce, and Frank Patterson, also of Salem and a junior in commerce, are two of the 27 men trying for positions on the varsity basketball squad at the state college this year.

The return of eight lettermen and six men from last year's team gives Coach Bob Hager material with which to build a winning team this season.

"I suppose," he remarked in a naive manner, "that most of these missing parts the bare necessities of life have been treacherously in price."

Another Dempsey-Tunney Title Fight Anticipated

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—(AP)—The possibility that Jack Dempsey would seek the heavyweight crown of Gene Tunney next July appeared today as the former king of the pugilistic realm held a lengthy conference with Tex Rickard in Madison Square Garden.

Although neither Rickard nor Dempsey would admit the conference concerned affairs of state, the report was current that the promoter sought an agreement to match Tunney early in the outdoor season as protection against the season of Jim Mullen, Chicago promoter, to match the titleholder against a logical opponent in the mid-west, some time in September. Rickard's agreement with Tunney is said to call for a title defense sometime before September 1, 1928.

"I have not signed to fight anyone," Dempsey said, "and I have not even decided whether or not I will enter the ring again. That must wait until the spring, when the lawsuits of Jack Kearns and Teddy Hayes have been settled."

Dempsey admitted, however, that in case he does try again to lift the crown Tunney won from him at Philadelphia and defended successfully in Chicago this fall, the battling will be done under Rickard's direction in accordance with an agreement entered into sometime ago.

"Just now," Dempsey said, "I'm here to fight Jack Kearns minimize the chance for injuries. A delegation of about 200 rooters will accompany the team to Corvallis on a special train leaving about 12:30 and returning early in the evening. The team itself will leave on a bus at 11:30 in the morning."

CORVALLIS HURDLE FACES SALEM HIGH

Heartened by the showing made against the Astoria Finns, Coach Louis Anderson is busy pointing his men for the Corvallis gridsters next Saturday at Corvallis. If this game is successfully hurdled, Salem may yet be able to voice its claim as one of the state's outstanding high school teams.

To make the schedule fully representative, a contract has been negotiated with Hood River for a game here Thanksgiving day, and efforts will be made to line up Harrisburg to fill the November 19 date which Hillsboro has held tentatively. Hillsboro has not yet returned a signed contract, so the date is open as far as the local school is concerned.

Harrisburg recently held Eugene high school to a scoreless tie, and the hitherto unknown school in the football world has come into prominence. A fair index of Salem's strength as compared to that of Eugene should result from the game, Coach Anderson believes. Principal J. C. Nelson dispatched a letter yesterday to Harrisburg officials asking them to come here November 19.

No guarantee other than expense of the trip for 16 men was offered. The Hood River contract calls for the payment of a $200 guarantee and a return game in the apple city on Thanksgiving day next year.

After a rather mediocre beginning, the red and black players snapped into the Astoria fray and line-plunged their way to victory. With Bernard Temple, the only man on the team who can punt for distance, pass accurately, and skirt the ends for gains, warming the bench, the two Kellys, Backs, and Blasco struck almost entirely to line plays and made yardage almost at will.

The men have been inclined to rely too much on Temple to carry the attack, and backfield coordination has, as a result, been undeveloped. Realizing that, with Temple out, the result of the game depended upon them, the other players came through in fine shape. With this cooperation behind him in the Corvallis game, Temple is expected to exceed himself as a crowd gatherer next Saturday.

None of the men were hurt in the Astoria game and only light scrapes will be on the training program this week as a result of the game.

"I suppose," he remarked in a naive manner, "that most of these missing parts the bare necessities of life have been treacherously in price."

Many of the 35,000 persons who saw the annual battle between Ohio State and Michigan, which opened Michigan's marvelous stadium, and who also saw the State-Northwestern game the week preceding, are trying to figure out why the team from Ohio finds itself trounced repeatedly.

The team boasts a goodly number of good football players—Griss, Eby, Marek, Rakowski, Huston, a sophomore, and others have natural football ability. What is more in most of its games the team started out like a winning combination, only to swing into a somewhat demoralized outfit, game but unsteady, later in the game.

Against Michigan, for instance, State took the aggressive at the opening of the game and after an exchange of punts started what seemed to be a march that couldn't be halted, toward the Michigan goal. A beautifully executed pass helped. A 10-yard gain through Michigan's line followed. Michigan suddenly held. Two futile efforts to advance and then State fumbled, but luckily recovered. The fumble, however, and the resistance, baffled the State team. A hurried try for a field goal followed and the ball bounced harmlessly to the ground just over the line.

In the second quarter Michigan slipped over a touchdown on a play that shouldn't have been pulled on a properly coached college team. Michigan came out of a huddle after one down, ran through the play and was downed without a gain near the sideline. Then, without going into a huddle or calling signals the Michigan team suddenly lined up over the ball and executed a short pass over the line before State realized what had happened.

Gilbert, Michigan backfield star, received the pass from Oosterbaan and pranced nine yards unhampered to the goal line. But what was more apparent during the game was the fact that the State eleven had no adequate defense for the much discussed Oosterbaan to Gilbert forward passing combination.

Since football crept into the sport pages last August seems had been written as to how Benny Oosterbaan, on the receiving end of the old Friedman to Oosterbaan team, would try his hand at hurling passes this year and that Gilbert would fill his shoes on the receiving end. Michigan scored all three touchdowns, Oosterbaan to Gilbert.

Frequent substitutions and changes in State's lineup failed to change the team's style of attack or defense.

Toward the end of the game it seemed as though the team had taken the game into its own hands. The play was opened up. Pass after pass was thrown in a frantic endeavor to at least cut down the 21 point lead. The backfield tore into the line with abandon. For the only time in the game Michigan faced the danger of having its goal line crossed.

Those of us who boast no allegiance to either university felt that the State team, as a team, deserved a better fate. The daring play for the first touchdown, the perfected defense for Oosterbaan-Gilbert passes, and the strategic attack of the Michigan team all through the game gave it the advantage, more than playing strength.
