

MISSING PLANE WRECKAGE SEEN

Report Reaches Panama of Debris Thought That of "Golden Eagle"

PANAMA, Nov. 5.—(AP)—An official investigation will be made tomorrow of a circumstantial report that the remains of an airplane of American manufacture has been washed on the beach at Chinina, a small fishing hamlet on the coast.

News of the find was brought here by fishermen. They also delivered to the captain of the port two drawings from which Mr. Summers, the American aeronautics commissioner, concluded that the wreckage was part of an American plane.

The remains consist of a boat-shaped contraption of fine lumber, according to the description by the fishermen.

Mr. Summers will leave tomorrow morning in an effort to investigate and identify the find.

Some quarters here incline toward the opinion that the wreckage is part of one of the planes lost in the Dole California-Honolulu air derby.

The American authorities declared it quite possible for the wreckage to have been swept toward the Panama isthmus.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 5.—(AP)—After reading a despatch from Panama telling of the finding of a "boat-shaped contraption" believed to be the wreckage of one of the airplanes lost in the Dole flight, three persons who followed the flight all agreed tonight that the meager description could fit only the monoplane "Golden Eagle," the all wood torpedo shaped plane piloted by Jack Frost and navigated by Gordon Scott.

Bartlett Stephens, assistant superintendent of Mills field, San Francisco's airport, pointed out that the Golden Eagle was the only missing plane which was built to be seaworthy.

The Golden Eagle was constructed with the joining seam extending through the center from the rear of the engine to the tip of the fuselage. It was battered by a storm it may break on this seam and in that event each section would be egg shaped in appearance.

It was a Lockheed Vega make, and the only one in the race of all wood body construction.

Judges were Miss Beryl Holt, Professor Monk and C. P. Bishop.

Captivating Farce Given By Theta Alpha Phi Cast

By Ralph Curtis

How through perfection of detail and setting, and the personal equation which is not possible in professional productions, the dramatic efforts of a collegiate group can often eclipse those of the professional stage, was exemplified in the presentation of "The Importance of Being Earnest" by Theta Alpha Phi dramatic fraternity in connection with the Willamette university homecoming festivities, Saturday night at the Grand theater.

Careful research had produced a lifelike reproduction of the costumes and manners of the nineties and the players adapted themselves admirably to this setting, producing an exceptionally pleasing effect.

The play itself, written by Oscar Wilde, has been declared by the most authoritative critics to be the most perfect farce in the English language; on the other hand, it is handicapped in the public conception through having been attempted by many an amateur cast which was not equal to its situations. Last night, for once, it was accorded full opportunity for appreciation, and from the manner in which the Theta Alpha Phi cast held its audience and the applause following the close of each act, it could readily be seen that the appreciation was not lacking.

In but one respect could the presentation have been improved; that was the matter of pace. Through insistence of the directors, it seemed, on too much emphasis along the way, the play did not proceed as rapidly as it should have, and the effect suffered thereby.

Special approval was merited by Ella Pfeiffer in the difficult character role of Lady Bracknell; by Virginia Edwards as the charming Cecily Cardew, and by Robert Witty for his imitable impersonation of the eccentric "Algernon."

Frank Alfred as John Worthington, M. P., carried a heavy role in a convincing manner, and was particularly admirable in the climax, when he had the entire dramatic load to carry. Virginia Merle Crites was another player who made the most out of an unusual role; Kathleen Garrison was effective as the worldly young lady, her sophistication contrasting sharply with "Cecily's" naivete. John Ramage exhibited unusual possibilities as a solemn country curate, and Raymond Derrick and Don Grant adhered closely to the characteristics usually attributed to English butlers.

The exceptionally perfect cosuming was directed by Louise Findley, Mary Louise Alken and Don Grant. Earl Douglas was general manager of the production, with Everett Faber in charge of publicity and Hugh Curtis in charge of the stage settings, which were attractive and appropriate, the garden scene in the second act being especially beautiful. Miss Marjorie Walker directed the production.

$4,000 Duty Paid On Over 1200 Barrels of Whale Oil

SAN PEDRO, Cal., Nov. 5.—(AP)—Three vessels of the Los Angeles whaling company today were released from custody of customs officials when $4,000 was paid on more than 1200 barrels of whale oil, rendered in American waters. The release was ordered by the treasury department at Washington.

All costs incident to the case were paid by the local concern before the vessels and cargo were freed from customs bonds.

Detention of the fleet came when it was reported that whales taken legally on the high seas by killer boats of Panamanian registry were rendered within the three mile limit. Decision in the case hinged upon the status of whale products obtained within federal jurisdiction.

IRRIGATION FINANCE BEING CONSIDERED

Trustee of State Reclamation Group Holds Meeting At Portland

PORTLAND, Nov. 5.—(AP)—Trustees of the Oregon reclamation congress meeting here today, considered a plan for refining state-aided irrigation districts through the assistance of the federal government.

The keynote of the plan was embodied in the following excerpt taken from resolutions referred to irrigation district officers by the trustees.

"Resolved, that we, the board of trustees of the Oregon reclamation congress, respectfully request and urge our congressional delegation and the members of congress as a whole, to provide a supplemental fund, under administration of the United States reclamation bureau, of not to exceed $10,000,000 for Oregon, bearing 3 per cent interest, with maturities spread over at least 40 years, for the refinancing and betterments on such state aided irrigation districts now built or largely constructed, and wholly or partly settled by settlers who are willing to pay their just debts at rate and amount which they reasonably can, based on present appraised productive value, in line with the 'fact finders' plan, the exact amount in each case to be determined by rigid appraisal, and are willing to deposit district refinancing bonds for such value with the federal reclamation bureau, similarly as in the Smith-McNary plan, provided present bond holders or their representatives will accept cash in this amount and agree to cancellation of existing bonds."

The proposal was received with approving sentiment but the resolution was not adopted inasmuch as it is to first be referred to officers of irrigation districts. Trustees will meet again November 19 for decision in the matter.

BULLETS WHISTLE CLOSE

Almost Hit City Workers; Source of Shots Not Learned

A spent rifle bullet whistled past a group of city sewer workers in the southeast Salem district yesterday afternoon and imbedded itself in a rock. A few seconds later, came another one following the same course.

The bullets seemed to come from the brush adjoining the section where the men were working but a careful search failed to disclose their origin. They may have come from the gun of a pheasant hunter, or someone thinking to throw a scare into the men, according to Commissioner W. S. Low.

Commissioner Low discounted the theory that the shots might have been fired by some southeast Salem citizen, in that alleged delay in inaugurating the improvement program in that section.
