Interesting Meeting of Salem Garden Club

An extremely interesting meeting of the Salem Garden Club was held Monday evening in the Chamber of Commerce auditorium. The speakers were Mrs. Daniel J. Fry, Sr., Mrs. William Everett Anderson and Mrs. William McGilchrist Jr., all of whom returned late this summer from extensive tours in the north and abroad.

Mrs. Fry was the first speaker of the evening. She described the gardens of Japan, speaking particularly of the dwarfing of the trees. A member of her party was given a miniature garden growing in a bowl and containing a tiny juniper tree which was one hundred years old. Since that time the garden has been given ordinary care and the little tree has grown twice as large as it was three months ago.

Other beautiful flora was found in Manila where Mr. and Mrs. Fry were the guests of Montague Lord, formerly of Salem. Before leaving Manila, Mrs. Fry was given a bouquet of these exquisite flowers, each spray of which was from eighteen to twenty inches long. The flowers which were going with the blossoms down, remained fresh for four weeks.

The famous botanical gardens in Java; and the garden in Agra and in Taj Mahale, appealed particularly to the speaker.

One after the other, the wild flowers of other foreign countries were described by Mrs. Fry: the mountain flowers of Sweden; the poppy which blooms in Bolshum; and the wild hollyhock and the wild cleander, native only in Palestine. Roses, buttercups, and Scotch broom were found in each country which the party visited.

Mr. McGilchrist spoke first of the wonderful Butchart gardens in Victoria, B. C.

Siberian poppies, which grow in incomparable beauty at Lake Louise were next described. The artistic gardens at George Washington's home at Mt. Vernon are unexcelled in beauty in the opinion of Mr. McGilchrist.

Mr. and Mrs. McGilchrist visited the gardens at St. James Palace and at Buckingham palace in London. Heliotrope and blue salvia were others that were seen in these charming English gardens.

Mr. McGilchrist told of the gardens, containing flowers similar to those growing in the Williamsletts Valley, which grow down to the water's edge along the River Thames. Other delightful English gardens were described.

Mr. McGilchrist was particularly enchanted with the wild heath of Scotland, his native country. A beautiful garden, perhaps the loveliest in the world, is maintained by a million dollar endowment left by Carnegie, in Pittinerie's Glenn at Dumfries, Scotland; Pittinerie's Glenn is Andrew Carnegie's birthplace.

Roses grow luxuriantly in Italy in November. The gardens of Barcelona, Spain and those of Versailles are among the most attractive in all Europe. A few lovely gardens were seen at Lucerne, Switzerland and in Germany, although a heavy frost had destroyed much of the floral beauty in the latter country. As it was bulb shipping time in Holland at the time Mr. and Mrs. McGilchrist visited that country they did not see the tulips and narcissi for which it is world famous.

Mrs. William Everett Anderson described the unusual wild flowers which she found in Alaska.

She said marigolds, nasturtiums and other well-known varieties were growing in boxes and flower-pots at homes at Fort Yukon.

Formal gardens which supply the hosts with flowers were seen by Mrs. Anderson at Ketchikan and Juneau.

Other flowers growing luxuriantly in the far north were the blue forget-me-nots, wild anemones, buttercups, lupin, wild columbine, bluebells, axolotls like, wine maple, wild currant, blue bells, sweet peas, gold-ferret, and wild roses, as well as other beautiful flowers which one would not expect to find in a land so near the arctic circle.

A committee was appointed at the business meeting which precedes the program to consider the beautification of the city park.
