NOT TAKING SIDES

UNIVERSITY OF OREGON DIS- CLAIMS PART IN ISSUE

UNIVERSITY OF OREGON, Eugene, Nov. 15.—(Special)—The University of Oregon is taking no stand in the present controversy over whether or not the name of the Oregon Agricultural college shall be changed to Oregon State college, it is stated by Dr. James H. Gilbert, dean of the college of liberal arts of the university. Reports have been noticed that state that the university has "long opposed the change." These reports are not true, it is stated by Karl Onthank, executive secretary of the university, who says that at no time has any statement of opinion in the matter been made by any one connected with the university.

Changing the name of the agricultural college is a matter for its board of regents, the governor and the legislature, university officials say. It has been noted here that Governor Patterson indicates that he is opposed to the change, since he feels that the college was created primarily to foster agriculture, the basic industry of the state.

Two Prohibition Agents Arrested After Party

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 15.—(AP)—Two prohibition agents—Thomas Lorschach and William Arnold—were suspended from the federal service Monday, after they had been arrested for driving an automobile into a downtown garage and enforcing their demand for "snappy service," with drawn pistols.

Arnold was charged with drunkenness, but that charge was dismissed in police court and one of disturbing the peace, to which he pleaded guilty, was placed against him. He will be sentenced tomorrow.
