Julian Eltinge and Tiffany Stock Company To Be Hollywood Attractions

Julian Eltinge, the world's famous woman impersonator and for twenty years past a reigning stage success, says he is delighted with his role in Al Christie's latest comedy production "Madame Behave" in which he is featured with Ann Pennington, the celebrated follies dancer and which will be on view at the Hollywood theater Monday night.

As an extra added attraction the Tiffany Stock company will present "The Spell of a Dragon," a Chinese mystery play. "The Hollywood is making five changes a week now in its picture presentations and the Tiffany Stock company will present a new play on Tuesday night.

No more startling exposure of the smuggeries of its ring leaders has ever come to the screen than that shown in "Moulders of Men," the picture dedicated to Elksdom and produced by FBO.

This picture comes to the Hollywood theater for Sunday only. The story is from the original by John Chapman Hilder, managing editor of the Elks' magazine, and was adapted for the screen by Dorothy Yost.

Its central figure is a wealthy physician and a high official in Elksdom, played by Conway Tearle, who puts an appointment as chief of the Secret Service division to the end that he may rid his town of all evils and vices.

His pursuit of the ring brings him in contact with a crippled boy, Frankie Davis, and his gangster brother, Rex Lane, through the aid of the Elks the crippled boy is restored to health and the gangster regenerated and, needless to say, Tearle cleans up the town.

Margaret Morris, in the leading feminine role, lends her beauty and talent to the role of a newspaper writer, and the supporting cast is the pick of Hollywood.

Ralph Ince has hit the high spot of his meteoric career as a director in bringing this epic to the screen.

BUYING AGENCY SAVES STATE LARGE SUM, SAID

In all cases, with the exceptions of emergencies, the supplies are purchased in the competitive market. Data in the office of the secretary of state shows that in the past there has been a marked variance in the prices charged the state for various supplies, materials and equipment. Some state departments were reported to have paid as much as $3.50 a carton for carbon paper, while other departments purchased this product for $1.10. The discrepancies in prices charged for other supplies were equally drastic and proved conclusively that the central purchasing agency was a needed department of the state government.

Chief opposition to the creation of the central purchasing agency was voiced by the state highway commission which purchases large amounts of road building materials and equipment annually. It was contended by employees of this department that many of their purchases were classified as emergencies, and that the requisition system would retard highway construction operations in the state.

This opposition was said to have been overcome by the state board of control through the election of L. P. Campbell as assistant state purchasing agent. Mr. Campbell has been connected with the highway commission for a number of years, and has purchased virtually all of the supplies used by that department.

In order to eliminate confusion and expedite state business the board of control has made it possible for virtually all state activities to purchase emergency supplies without first submitting a requisition to the purchasing agent. This authority is limited, however, and in no case will the secretary of state audit a claim against the state unless it has been approved by the board of control. Because of the failure of the legislature to authorize any additional appropriation to cover the increased work of the state purchasing agency, the operations are being carried on without the employment of extra help.

Under a plan adopted by the state board of control under the old law the larger purchases of state supplies are made twice annually. These supplies are purchased in the competitive market and cover a period of six months, bids are opened by the board of control in June and December.

Letters requesting the heads of the various governmental activities to send in lists of supplies needed during the period January 1 to June 30 of next year, are now being mailed by the state purchasing agent. Advertisements for bids on these supplies will be inserted in the newspapers late in November, and the proposals will be considered at a meeting of the board of control to be held in December.

In the absence of any tabulated report showing the amount of money that is being saved under the operation of the central purchasing agent, officials pointed out that the results had been gratifying, and that the law proves the means of reducing materially the cost of conducting the state government.
