

TUNNEY DISCUSSES RELIGION QUESTION

"Distinct From Creeds," Says World Heavyweight Champion Boxer

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—(AP)—Religion is the highest and all-encompassing ideal of Gene Tunney, he said today in discussing his philosophy of life.

Second in his scale of values comes loyalty, to be followed in order by "devotion to duty, friend and health."

The heavyweight champion talked of ideals just before meeting President Coolidge, who told him that he looked "like a motion picture actor." Later Tunney attended the annual marines-army football game for the president's cup.

Although womanhood plays no direct part in Tunney's ideals, he thinks that motherhood is one of the most beautiful things in life and that "every able-bodied, wholesome minded American boy should aspire to a home of his own." Asked if this opinion would apply to him personally, he remarked: "Just now I am so busy that there is no time to think about the distant future."

"Religion is most important to children," Tunney said, "but later they grow to discard the dogmas while adhering to faith in God as the Creator of all things and to the immortality of the soul. I speak of religion as distinct from creeds."

"After that come loyalty and devotion to duty. They are related but dissimilar. Loyalty takes in patriotism, while devotion to duty means observance of basic principles and ethics."

"Third I would place friendship, both between men and between man and woman. No thought of sex enters here. It means a willingness to sacrifice for a friend."

PROTESTS CIRCULAR

MANIPULATIONS EFFECTIVE IN INFANTILE CLAIM

Dr. J. L. Lynch of Salem, president of the Oregon Osteopathic association, has sent a letter to Dr. Frederick D. Stricker, secretary of the state board of health, criticizing a recent circular issued by the state health board in connection with the treatment of infantile paralysis cases.

The circular advises six rules during acute stages of the disease. One of these rules reads that "electrical treatment, mechanical manipulation and massage are absolutely contra-indicated during the stage of pain and tenderness, and in fact are definitely harmful."

Dr. Lynch, on behalf of the osteopathic association, wrote:

"The directions or rules covering particularly the acute stages of infantile paralysis are so directly opposite to that practiced by our profession, that it would seem a direct challenge to us."

"Statistics covering thousands of cases treated by hundreds of osteopathic physicians using mechanical manipulation, have proved that skillful manipulation given by one properly trained to give it, results in the least possible permanent paralysis and in most cases a complete recovery if the case received proper manipulation treatment as soon as diagnosis can be established."

OFFICER NEED SEEN

NATION LACKS LEADERS IN ACTIVE TRAINING, CLAIM

The basis of military strength in the United States is the reserve officers training corps, numbering 100,000 officers, 25,000 of whom are taking active work to keep abreast of new developments, according to Deputy Attorney General Miles McKey, who addressed members of the Lion's club at last week's luncheon.

Yet, military officials say that 200,000 officers would be required to mobilize the men in an emergency, and with only one-eighth of that number in active training, the country is not properly prepared, said McKey.

The replenishment of personnel in the training corps is done in three ways, through the R. O. T. C. in universities and colleges, the citizens military training camps, and special schools.

The speaker traced army development through the different wars participated in by the United States. When troop raising was under state instead of national jurisdiction during the revolutionary war, the war of 1812, and the civil war, the army was not efficient, and the wars were prolonged unnecessarily at a great cost of life and money. During the recent world war, the United States could have placed competent troops in the field 14 months earlier, if the country had been properly prepared, McKey declared.

Harry Scott, chairman of the Moront Olson play committee, reported financial success of the project and extended thanks to the press and workers for the fine support given.

The body of Mrs. Ellie Eastman Tuttle, 67, a widow who committed suicide by hanging at Dundee November 4, was sent to her former home at Dan Molnes, Ia.
