CITY LICENSE LEGAL

REGULATION OF DAIRIES AP-PROVED IN OPINION

The city of Klamath Falls has authority under its charter to license and regulate dairies located in the city, according to a legal opinion prepared here Friday by the attorney general. The opinion was written at the request of W. M. Duncan, district attorney for Klamath county.

Mr. Duncan asked whether the city can take over the work of inspecting and regulating dairies, or whether this must be done by the state under the dairy and food act.

The attorney general held in his opinion that the city has authority under its charter to regulate dairies and to supervise and license the dairying business within the municipal limits.

The city has authority to exact license fees from persons engaged in the operation of a dairy or selling milk within the city.

There also is ample authority, the attorney general said, for the city to enact reasonable ordinances on the subject notwithstanding that it is already covered by state legislation.

The attorney general held that there must be no conflict between the city and the state legislation.

Objects to Debris

SIDEWALKS AND STREETS UNTIDY, SAYS MERCHANT

Complaint against the Salem police department for failure to enforce the city ordinance requiring business establishments to have the fronting sidewalks swept before nine o'clock in the morning was voiced to Judge Mark Poulsen yesterday by William Gahldorf, a Court street merchant.

Mr. Gahldorf alleges that certain firms near his place of business allow long periods of time to elapse before sweeping off the accumulated debris, with the result that the sidewalks are not only unattractive, but often filthy as well.

Sidewalk obstructions are also objected to by Mr. Gahldorf who cites the following cases of grievance:

Remus Insanity Fit Was Mere Anger, Contention

CINCINNATI, Dec. 2.—(AP)—The prosecution in George Remus' trial has set about proving that the outbreak of the defendant, which nearly a score of witnesses had testified indicated insanity, was nothing more than fits of anger common to him long before he had heard anything concerning the alleged misconduct of the wife he killed.

Willie H. Haas, Savannah, Ga., former bootlegger, who served a sentence in the Atlanta federal penitentiary while Remus was in the witness box as a defense witness.

"Didn't Remus get very mad when the prisoners in the Atlanta penitentiary would cry out: 'Who ate the cheese?' and answer themselves with: 'Remus, the rat,' asked Carl B. Baer, assistant prosecutor, on cross examination.

The defense objected strenuously, Charles H. Elston, co-counsel with Remus, asserting that the only purpose of such an interrogation could be to prejudice the jury or cause ill feelings towards Remus.

"We want simply to show these spells simply were mad spells, that they were simply fits of anger, and not insanity at all," Baer told Judge Chester R. Shook. "We want to show that Remus had them long before anything came up about Mrs. Remus."

Remus who had sat quietly all day, bounced to his feet with an attack upon Baer.

"There was not a prisoner down there wide enough, large enough or powerful enough to insinuate a thing like that," Remus roared, his face and neck flaming red.

Autopsy Made in Death of Washington Trapper

SHELTON, Wash., Dec. 1.—(AP)—The death of Marius Carstensen, 48, Tahuya trapper, was caused by either a rifle or revolver bullet, and not by a shotgun charge, it was determined at a second autopsy here today, following upon the first, at which it had been decided a shotgun had caused his fatal wound.

Charles Lundy, 25, another trapper, was being held on an open charge. Lundy was arrested after his father, George Lundy, a member of the searching party that found Carstensen's body, had declared his son and Carstensen had quarreled. Young Lundy admitted yesterday that he was in the swamp where the trapper's body was found, the day of the killing, but denied he had any weapon other than a shotgun.
