Fears Felt For Condition of Many Others; Twenty One Missing

QUEBEC, Dec. 15.—(AP)—The ice-shattered ruins of Hospice St. Charles orphanage for girls today had given up the bodies of 33 children who perished when a fire destroyed the structure last night. Twenty-one others still were missing.

Throughout the day firemen and volunteers combed the tangled wreckage while grief-stricken relatives besieged the morgue and hospitals in search of their children. Some of the missing, it was believed, had been taken home by friends and relatives who had no reported their safety.

Only a waste of charred wreckage marked the site of the 95 year old stone-walled orphanage. A modern wing, however, was untouched by the flames. Sorrowing crowds which flocked to the blaze last night returned today to aid in the search of the ruins.

Explosion of a furnace in the basement was believed at first to have caused the fire, but firemen later said the cause of the blaze was a mystery. A passerby who saw smoke curling from the windows gave the alarm, but the old building was kindling for the flames. Its walls, crumpled inward before the work of rescue could be completed.

Nuns and lay teachers risked their lives to lead most of the orphans to the street. Rose Ann Gaureault, 17, died in her effort to save all her charges in the baby ward. Others, cut off from stairways, leaped from the windows into life nets and snowdrifts.

Survivors told of the heroism of Miss Gaureault, who saved the lives of a score of little girls who she led through smoke and flame from upper floors. Ignoring her own danger, she made a last trip up the shaking stairs. Hours later her body was carried from a corridor near a room in which several sets were suffocated in their sleep.

CINCINNATI, Dec. 15.—(AP)—Capping its long effort to send George Remus to the electric chair for murder, the prosecution late today presented as a witness the 68 year old grey haired mother of the wife he slew, and, with the jury still leaning forward eagerly to catch her low-voiced testimony, suddenly rested its case.

The defense too, attempted to spring a coup. It unexpectedly announced its case was closed.

That left out of the record the final report of the three alienists who today presented their final conclusion:

"That the defendant, George Remus, was sane at the time of the commission of the act of killing, to wit, on October 6, 1927."

DUCE STILL OFFISH

Diplomatic Channels Used First, She Insists

ROME, Dec. 15.—(AP)—Preliminary work must be done through conversations and diplomatic channels before Premier Mussolini of Italy and M. Briand, French foreign minister, meet for a final exchange so that there may be an understanding between France and Italy.

The premier, in making this assertion before the council of ministers today, said he was inspired by a desire to reach an understanding over the various pending questions between the two countries.

Italy desires to have the Italian nationality of her colony in Tunis protected, recognition of her interests in Tangiers and acknowledgment of her rights in the Adriatic and also her preponderant interests in the Balkans.

Furthermore, Italy desires that the anti-fascist propaganda in France be discouraged, as she considers it a violation of her right to conduct her internal affairs in her own way, without foreign interference. France has shown a good disposition in this direction.

He pointed out that the freighter had no wireless and there was nothing to disprove that it might be lying in a sheltered spot, inaccessible from land.
