

Elimination of Dining Room is Latest Wrinkle

Elimination of the dining room space in the house of today is one of the features of the small house planning, and the house plan shown today does away with this waste space by making use of a breakfast nook of good size for the intimate family meals, using the dining room space on the first floor for a master bedroom.

This five-room house has three bedrooms, one on the first floor and two on the upper half story. All of the bedrooms are large and provided with ample closet space. One of the features of the plan is the large living room, which can be used for a dining room when entertaining large parties. The living room is 15x25 feet and has three exposures, insuring complete cross ventilation during the summer months. The fireplace is located at the front of the house next to the porch, which has a small entry.

The kitchen is designed to eliminate unnecessary steps on the part of the house-wife, through compactness. This room has two exposures and as planned provides plenty of built-ins. Two sets of blueprints may be obtained for a nominal cost upon application to

CLAIM NO BREAK FOR RATES SOON

Some Mills Resuming Operations and Prices Said To Be Holding Own

Notwithstanding that many of the best sales-managers in the Pacific northwest are seriously and conscientiously endeavoring to obtain fifty cents to two dollars more for many items on the list, and, notwithstanding that business is coming through in considerable volume at these advanced prices, it is no easy matter to close new business at the meager advances which are asked. This may be due in part to the fact that commission buyers and wholesalers are still strenuously endeavoring to cover old business at old prices and there are always some who are willing to accept business at old prices knowing full well that prices have advanced, but trusting to their buying skill to persuade mills to protect them on the old basis. While a great deal of new business has developed during the past two weeks, much of this has been absorbed by big mills so that numerous other small companies have not increased their order files materially.

Atlantic coast business did not develop as had been expected on account of uncertainty in regard to February rates. It is now stated that this matter has been definitely arranged so that there is no possibility of a break in rates during the next six weeks. This ought to result in stability in that market for the present at least.

One of the features of the market has been the rail yard and industrial demand from points east of Chicago. This territory has been coming into the market in good shape and is filling in nicely until about February 1 when business west of Chicago is expected to open up in volume.

For the past two weeks developments have been very favorable from the manufacturing standpoint, particularly on account of almost total suspension of lumber manufacturing and logging in Oregon on account of one of the worst snow storms in years. This enforced curtailment lasted from a week to two weeks and many camps are still unable to operate. There has also been enforced curtailment in southern parts of Washington and in the higher sections of the state.

The log market is exceptionally strong. Some Puget Sound loggers are threatening to add another dollar to the price, but millmen declare they can not possibly pay even present prices. Many mills, even now, are having to shut down intermittently on account of scarcity of logs. One good sized Pacific mill with logging camps, is seriously considering suspending its manufacturing activities and selling its logs. This company maintains it can make nothing on the spread in the price of logs and the price obtained for the manufactured product.

Many shingle mills, including some of the larger ones, have resumed operations. This has not had a very good effect on the market although prices are holding.

It seems to be the opinion of authorities that as soon as the present surplus of cedar logs is cut up, which will not take long, raw cedar will be considerably higher. This may have some effect on the price of shingles. (Reprint from West Coast Lumberman January 15, 1928.)

DIRECTOR PUBLIC RELATIONS NAMED

Winfield Scott Has Had Considerable Experience In Special Work

Winfield Scott has been appointed director of public relations for the western division of the National Lumber Manufacturers' association, with headquarters in San Francisco. His jurisdiction extends over California, Oregon, Washington, British Columbia, Idaho, Montana, Utah, Nevada and Arizona.

For the past three years Scott has been writing and speaking for the California Redwood association, and California White & Sugar Pine Manufacturers association and the California Protective association. His public relations work includes a period of several years with the Western Pacific railroad. He will have to do with all publication and public relations work except advertising.

Scott is widely known in California both as a writer and a speaker. In the past three years he has spoken to perhaps 200,000 people on re-forestation, timber conservation, fire control and prevention and similar topics. He is to extend this line of work throughout the coast and those intermountain states that come within his jurisdiction, speaking to men's and women's clubs and higher institutions of learning.

period last year when 6,658 persons were killed by automobiles. Figures compiled by the American Motorists association, show that this year there were 22.1 persons killed per 100,000, against 20.07 per 100,000 killed last year. The figures cover only the 77 largest cities of the United States.

Purchases Five Acre Tract and Will Build

A. A. Harms, formerly of Gooding, Idaho, has purchased a five acre tract from Alex Rowland. The tract is located in what is known as the Hollywood acreage about two miles northeast of Salem. O. K. Middleton, 304 Oregon building, made the deal. They will take possession at once, making this their home. Mr. Harms is a carpenter by trade.

You Can't Lose — But You Can Win Big!

Oakland Sport "6" Sedan First Grand Prize

ALL-AMERICAN—that's the word. And no other word describes it!

American principles of design. American standards of beauty. American stamina and endurance. The pride of America's greatest proving ground, the product of American craftsmen using American precision-production methods... that's the new Oakland All-American Six! The minute you see it you'll say, "That's the car!" A big, rugged, brilliantly beautiful Six. With mastery in every detail of its Fisher bodies—the mastery of America's master body builders. Flashing performance. Abundant speed. The stamina to endure—to duplicate the first fresh, exhilarating miles one year—two years—five years from the day you buy it... that's the Oakland All-American Six!

Under the hood an impressive engine, 212 cubic inches in displacement. A hurricane for power. Yet silken-smooth and silent as a whisper. Entirely new in principle and design. Counterbalanced crankshaft over 78 pounds in weight—four bronze-backed bearings—the Harmonic Balancer, Oakland's rubber silencing principle, and a new type of combustion chamber designed to eliminate both vibration and roughness.

Ruggedness? Dependability? To be sure! But have you studied the chassis of the Oakland All-American Six? The deep, rigid anti-torsion frame? The "bridge truss" construction of the unit-cast cylinder block and crankcase? The big, self-ventilating, self-adjusting clutch? The big, smooth shifting transmission? The mechanical four-wheel brakes? They tell you that reliability was the paramount factor in the design of the new All-American Six!

Yet even that isn't all. Triple engine protection by oil, air, and gasoline filters—thorough crankcase ventilation—thermostatic heat control—visual distributor adjustment guide—for feed fuel pump—all of them factors of long life and economy—all of them employed to make endurance the outstanding characteristic of the Oakland All-American Six!

Power, smoothness, silence, snap. Reliability that touches your heart because it so seldom touches your purse. Comfort, peace of mind and pride—these are yours when you choose this new interpretation of America's needs in a motor car!
