Local Realtor Sued— Action was yesterday brought against Rich L. Reiman by Fred J. Siewert, who demands a total of $488.75 and costs. Siewert's cause of action is based on the contention that he worked as a real estate agent out of Reiman's office. He negotiated a trade between two parties, Scopli and Mor-

fit, he alleges, and also sold a piece of property for a man named Wolfe for $9000. On the first deal the commission was $347.50 and on the second the commission was $450. Siewert claims that under his arrangements with Reiman part of the money should go to Reiman but that Siewert's shares should be $173.75 and $315, respectively.

Good For Reporting Lectures— A class in Karam shorthand is being organized at the Capital Business college to begin next Monday. It may be learned in six weeks. This may be what you want—good for college students and reporters to take notes. Investigate.

Remodelling at Mack's Completed— The interior of Mack's has been refinished in beautiful tones of rose and orchid until it comes as near as anything can to vying with the chic and colorful delightfulness of the new spring frocks and hats and the tailored smartness of the popular ensembles which fill the marvelous little mirrored cases lining the walls. Indeed, both the shop and the attractive things on display are well worth seeing.

Legal Point in Issue— With a demurrer filed here yesterday in circuit court to the complaint in the case of Lowell Mortgage and Adjustment company vs. Estella Wise, the question is presented squarely to the court as to whether one party may sue another under a different name than his own. H. H. Emmons, Portland attorney, brought action in Marion county circuit court against Estella Wise without using his own name, but suing instead under the name Lowell Mortgage and Adjustment company. A ruling by Judge Percy R. Kelly, before whom the demurrer is to be argued, will be necessary to decide the question, possibility also being seen that an appeal may be taken to the state supreme court from Judge Kelly's decision.
