MILDRED ROBERTS

Charming portraits of Mrs. John J. Roberts, prominent society matron, who is gifted vocally, and her accomplished daughter, Miss Mildred Roberts, a violinist of much promise. Miss Roberts is a student at St. Helen's Hall.

FEBRUARY

The sun rides higher and the lengthening days are bright and crisp. The frost is white on curling grass, and crocuses, in warm, protected spots, look worshipfully up toward the pale sun. The hedges are bare, smooth boughs; their fringe of tassels red, with every passing wind. The songster, fragment of an evening sky, alights upon a budding lilac shrub. The robins, too, are here, and Spring is waiting, just outside the door.

Mrs. W. Carlton Smith is Warmly Received at Institutions Department Tea

At the February meeting of the Institutions Department of the Salem Woman's club, which was held on Thursday at the woman's club house, Mrs. W. Carlton Smith provided a program of unusual charm. Mrs. Smith, one of Salem's prominent matrons, having recently returned from a tour abroad, spoke most engagingly of her experiences in and impressions of the European countries.

Mrs. S. M. Endicott, Mrs. D. H. Ross, Mrs. David Wright, and Mrs. George Lewis received the guests. At the tea hour, the group who received, assisted by Mrs. J. H. Lauterman and Mrs. C. E. Stricklin, served the refreshments. A group of special guests were present for the meeting. These included: Mrs. William Pennington, Mrs. W. F. Fargo, Mrs. F. M. Erickson, Mrs. Paul Hauser, Mrs. Roy Burton, Mrs. Harry J. Weidner, and Mrs. W. H. Burghardt.

A particularly talented young pianist, Miss Elizabeth Lewis, gave the special music of the afternoon. Miss Lewis played both Chopin's "Minute Waltz" and Goddard's "Second Mazurka." Pussy willows and spring flowers decorated the club rooms. In greeting her audience, Mrs. W. Carlton Smith, the speaker, wished for each one present the joy to come, if not already experienced, of a trip abroad. She spoke of the comfortable boat on which her party sailed and suggested that the would-be tourist sail from Montreal, to shorten the sea voyage by two days.

The success of the American Legion convention was proclaimed in a new way when Mrs. Smith described it. She had many tributes to pay to the jewel of cities, Paris. She described to the women before her the river, Seine; the beautiful civic center, three miles long; the wonders of Notre Dame cathedral. At the Louvre, she was impressed, as so many tourists always are, by the immortal wonder of the original of Whistler's "Mother." No doubt Mrs. Smith, being a woman, had cherished the desire to visit Worth's famous style house long before she ever crossed the water. To receive an invitation to this exceedingly exclusive and smart salon was one more triumph in a wonderfully pleasant continental tour. The exquisite wax figures at Worth's were described to the audience at the club house.

The group listened eagerly to her portrayal of Italian life in Rome, Florence, and Venice. In turn, in Rome, Mrs. Smith visited St. Peter's, and found the statuary just as wonderful as the reports have made it. She was interested in the recent reproduction of the old paintings to mosaic form.

In describing Mt. Vesuvius, Mrs. Smith explained that every 10 minutes a veritable column of smoke and fire issues from the crater, and that all around the vicinity of Mt. Vesuvius the ground is very fertile.

The absence of vehicles in Venice was to be expected. The uniform use of the gondola was exceedingly picturesque. Mrs. Smith commented particularly on the very musical quality of the peculiar signals the gondoliers used in passing. In the canals. In this one city there are 350 bridges.

Mrs. Smith found Florence a city particularly famed for its silverware, pottery, pictures, and costumes.

Mrs. Smith visited Monte Carlo, and the Casino. In speaking of the Mediterranean, she described the water as a lovely bluish-pink.

In Switzerland, Mrs. Smith saw the famous lion carved in the mountain at Lucerne, to commemorate the faithfulness of a Swiss

Of much interest in Salem, where the family is well-known, is the news of the marriage of Miss Gladys Lillian Cartwright, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Richard Cartwright, to Mr. Chester Alfred Smith, which has been formally announced by the bride's parents.

The ceremony took place at Pacific Grove, California on Saturday, January 14.

Several of the merchants generously contributed articles of furniture when the rooms were outfitted at the opening of the semester that has just closed.
