

33 SECONDS ENOUGH FOR HOBBS VICTORY

Two sledge hammers, encased in leather gloves, came out of a corner of the ring at the armory last night, beat a barrage on the chin of Bill Hingworth, and the fight was over in thirty seconds technically.

Wesley Hobbs, of Los Angeles, propelled the stone-smashers. Hingworth went down from the succession of blows for a count of six, got up, met another smash, and went down again. While Referee Tom Loutitt tolled off the second count, he got to his feet, but once more sank back.

In keeping with rules of the game, Loutitt awarded the fight to Hobbs, as the Tillamook boy went down without being hit.

This didn't please the fans. They had come to see a fight, not an immediate fade-out. It didn't please Hingworth, or his manager either. Hobbs, with rare sportsmanship, asked that the fight be continued.

The bout did continue, but the fight didn't. Finally, after Hobbs had pounded the dazed Hingworth for five rounds, he called time in the sixth with a clean left to the face.

Hingworth, who had been against the ropes, Loutitt ruled Hobbs' winner.

All of the five rounds went to Los Angeles by a wide margin. Hingworth kept away and made Hobbs lead. Now and then Hobbs would get Hingworth against the ropes and send him to the ground.

Only in the second round did Hingworth land what could be called a blow.

Hobbs, undoubtedly, is the toughest fighter ever to appear in the local arena. Already there is talk of having him meet the champion Alaskan, here.

His left, especially, is effective. He has a Dempsey crouch, starts his blows far back, and brings them forward with lightning rapidity with his whole strength.

Terry Kileen, popular independent school boy, fought Russell Wayne, of Portland, too clever for him. Wayne knocked Terry out in the fourth round.

In the sixth round, a windup Wayne is the only one of the crowd round the bell and hit him. He was rolling around on the floor, completely out from the first punch. He was slow in coming out in the fourth. Wayne

PAUL SMITH ENTERS TRANS-CONTINENTAL

Smith is in tip-top condition and plans to exert every effort to win the $25,000 first prize offered by C. C. Pyle, the cold-cash sport promoter.

William Greenberg, manager of the Portland outdoor, began Smith, and went with him to Los Angeles. Greenberg will accompany Smith on the long jaunt, in a car with banners proclaiming the fact that Oregon's hiking miner is in the race.

The management of the race will provide lodging, food, medical service, pure drinking water and transport a limited amount of personal effects for the contestants.

Race officials will check the time made by each racer between given points each day. Thus, though all may arrive in New York the same day, the winner may have made the trip in actual time many days less than a man who checks simultaneously.

There will be a caravan of supply trucks, officials' cars, press machines, moving picture automobiles and others moving along with the racers, according to word received by Greenberg.

The route has been determined on to Chicago. The balance of the trail will be announced shortly. Following are some of the cities on the race route: San Bernardino, Cal.; Needles, Ariz.; Albuquerque, N. M.; Amarillo, Texas; Oklahoma City, Oklahoma; St. Louis, Mo.; and Chicago.

Ten prizes have been offered, starting with $25,000 for the first winner, $10,000 for the second and with graduated amounts down to $1,000 for the 10th.

BEARCATS FACE TOUGH PROSPECT MISSIONARY FIVE UNCANNY SHOTS

By Victor D. Carlson. The Bearcats face a tough assignment tonight at Walla Walla, and again tomorrow night.

Whitman, with victories over Oregon, Idaho, and Washington State college, is ranked by common consent as perhaps the strongest team in the northwest.

Williamette, which started off impressively, and had all the symptoms of outstanding hoop performance this season, has been playing indifferent ball of late, and even the most optimistic Bearcat supporter sees no chance of victory in either game.

The teams are now tied for the conference leadership with three victories each.

"Doc" Hubbard, mentor of the Puget Sound Loggers who dropped two games by one-sided scores to the Missionaries, has no alibis whatever to offer.

"They shoot from anywhere on the floor and the ball rolls through almost miraculously. Every kind of shot known in the basketball books was used, and I'm not sure but that they shot with their feet, as well."

Crowell's shooting position is from the foul line, or corners. Holmgren ropes them in from the center circle. Woods is equally accurate on short or long shots.

Holmgren takes the ball off the offensive backboard, and Woods gets it on the defensive backboard. They're marvels at this.

"Most of their shots came from beyond the 17 foot zone, however. The baskets are of the old-fashioned type and very rigid. It is necessary to loop the ball high to get it through. The Missionaries could do it, but our shots rolled crazily about the rim and fell out. Sometimes, the ball seemed to jump out after being half through."

Hubbard believes Williamette's five man defense will give Whitman more trouble than did his man-to-man style.

The Bearcats should have little trouble defeating the College of Idaho next Monday and Tuesday. The Coyotes have lost several games this season to mediocre town teams. On the other hand, the small concrete-walled floor at Caldwell may prove a decided disadvantage to Williamette. The first game will be played at Caldwell, but the second has been scheduled at Ontario, where there is a very desirable playing floor.

The players return to Salem next Thursday just the day before a two-game series with College of Puget Sound here.

Cardinal is high point of the Williamette squad in the three conference games already played. Sixteen field goals, and four free throws make his point total 36.

Litchfield, Hawk, and De Poe are tied for second honors with 12 each.
