VERDICT AGAINST DUKE $8,000,000

Estate of Rich Tobacco King—Sued By New England Manufacturer

NEWARK, N. J., Feb. 14.—(AP).—A federal court jury tonight returned a verdict of $8,000,000 for George D. Hackell, New England manufacturer in his suit for $45,000,000 against the estate of James B. Duke, tobacco magnate.

The jury deliberated five hours. Haskell, president of the Bausch Machine Tool company of Springfield, Mass., sought damages from the Duke estate alleging that Duke had repudiated an agreement to enter the aluminum business and had sold out to the Aluminum company of America.

It is expected Haskell will ask that damages be trebled to $24,000,000, this provision being allowed under a clause of the Sherman anti-trust act.

An appeal will be taken by Duke counsel, and Judge Runyon announced tonight that his term of court would be extended for 90 days to permit the defense to perfect its appeal.

At the present time Haskell has two other suits pending against the tobacco magnate's estate and the Aluminum company in New York and Massachusetts. While testifying on the stand however, he said that a favorable judgment in one case would result in his dropping the other actions.

Haskell claimed that Duke in an agreement with him had made extensive arrangements to enter the aluminum business but this agreement was later broken and Duke sold out to the Aluminum company. Duke died in October 1925, leaving the bulk of his estate, estimated at more than $100,000,000 to his daughter, Doris.

It is having its effect on England. While not yet ready for national prohibition, apparently, John Bull sees the handwriting on the wall. Every year his subjects are cutting down their drink bill. In 1926 approximately $1,500,000,000 was spent in England for liquor. The 1927 figure will approximate $1,250,000,000, a decrease of nearly 17 per cent.
