LIE OREGON STATESMAN, SALEM, OREGON, FRIDAY MORNING, MARCH 9, 1928

on that the events porcrayed are not fiction, but the most dramatic incidents in the most critical period of American history and in the life of its greatest and most beloved statesman, is the factor which makes John Drinkwater's "Abraham Lincoln," presented last night at the Elsinore by a New York cast, unique in the field of drama, and which makes all ordinary criticism futile. Some in the audience may have been disappointed at first in the portrayal of Lincoln by Eustace Wyatt, but their verdict was reversed when they saw him in the touching scenes at cabinet meetings when he faced opposition from his colleagues as well as from without, and at the war headquarters of General Grant, when he pardoned the youthful soldier who had been condemned to death for sleeping on his post. AOthers in the cast who performed notably were Beatrice Garin in the relatively minor role of a maid; Augustus Collette as Secretary of State Seward; William Dorbin as the rebellious Secretary Hook, and Percy Bollinger as General U. S. Grant.
