IBSEN CENTENNIAL TO BE CELEBRATED

Dr. John O. Hall of Willamette To Address Portland Ibsen Festival

Centennial observances in honor of Henrik Ibsen, greatest of modern dramatists, will be held in all parts of the world next week, on convenient dates nearest to the 100th anniversary of Ibsen's birth, which occurred at Skein, Norway, March 18, 1828.

Dr. John O. Hall, head of the public speaking department at Willamette university and a close student of the "father of modern drama," will be the principal speaker at the Ibsen festival in Portland.

To his class in play production at the university, Dr. Hall, who like Ibsen is a native of Norway, outlined the dramatist's life.

Ibsen was of German, Danish, Scotch and Norwegian descent, thus qualifying as an example of the apparently beneficial results of racial intermixture. His ancestors had been sea captains, but in Henrik's boyhood his father became bankrupt. The deep study of humanity which is the secret of Ibsen's greatness, is believed to have had its root in the bewilderment of the impressionable boy at the smothering he experienced at the time at the hands of former companions in a community where wealth was the criterion of social standing.

As a schoolboy, his only apparent talent was along the line of painting, but his poverty prevented its cultivation. When 16 years old, Ibsen became a drug clerk in a provincial Norwegian town, and there his revolt against social prejudice found outlet in the drawing of caricatures of the town's "elite," some of which found their way into the victims' hands and caused him to be even more an outcast. Here he wrote "Catharina," his first drama, which deservedly failed of recognition. During this time, he had studied for a scholastic degree, but failed in the examination. Next he became with two other young men an editor of "Andra," a radical paper. For some of its articles, the other two were arrested and Ibsen escaped; the paper was abandoned.

Old Bull, world famous violinist, "discovered" Ibsen and made him director of the National theater which he built at Bergen out of his concert earnings abroad. Ibsen here wrote more plays which were as mediocre as the first; but while on leave of absence to travel and study, he studied stage settings and returned with ideas which revolutionized that art.

Later he was director of the Royal theater at Christiania. He wrote more plays and applied several times for the author's stipend which the government granted to promising authors, but was repeatedly refused it. Embittered, he left Norway and made his home in Germany. There he wrote "Brand," his first worthwhile play, and upon recognition of its merit by the great critic Brandes, he became famous at once, although other critics in all parts of Europe bitterly assailed him.

BOY NOVELIST AROUSES COMMENT

Robert S. Carr, 18, until recently a high school student in Ashley, O., and Columbus, O., is the author of "The Rampant Age," a novel about the younger generation that is arousing comment among parents, educators and the clergy.

now in receivership, according to announcement made here Wednesday by Mark McCallister, state corporation commissioner.

The announcement was inspired by a letter received from Stanley Myers, district attorney of Multnomah county, requesting the inquiry. It was explained by Mr. McCallister that he had received two letters from District Attorney Myers relating to the probe. In the first letter he referred to the Oegon Trust company. The second letter was in the nature of a correction and requested investigation of the affairs of the Clark, Kendall company.

Mr. McCallister said the Oregon Trust company, which has gone into receivership, is concerned only because its assets were taken over by Clark, Kendall & company.

It was said that the first investigation of the affairs of Clark, Kendall & Company began April 11, 1927, while the late George E. Davis was state corporation commissioner. This probe showed that the interim holders were fully protected.

On June 25 of this year the company was granted a permit to sell $100,000 worth of preferred stock. On September 22 another examination was conducted by Charles S. Warrens, special examiner for the state corporation department. This investigation revealed no outstanding interim receipts, but indicated that there were partial bond liabilities aggregating approximately $5600. Funds on deposit in the Bank of California were more than sufficient to cover the partial payment deposits.

On November 21 Mr. Warrens conducted examination, which showed no outstanding interim receipts. At the time of the last examination Mr. Warrens was informed by officials that the company intended to go into liquidation.

Acting upon this information Mr. Warrens recommended to the corporation commissioner that the company's permit to sell diversified coupon bonds be cancelled. The corporation department also cancelled the company's permit to sell $100,000 of preferred stock. On November 26 the company's permit to operate as a stockbroker was cancelled by the corporation commissioner.

Mr. McCallister said the interim certificates issued by the company were segregated and protected, and all interim holders were paid in full when the company went into liquidation.

MISSIONARY GROUP WILL MEET TODAY

Hazel Green School Crowded, Playground Insufficient, Reported

HAZEL GREEN, March 14.—(Special)—The Women's Missionary association will meet with Mrs. G. W. Davis Thursday afternoon, with Mrs. Charles Lonham leader. Subject is "The Stars and Stripes in the Orient." "A Personally Conducted Tour" will be given. This is the regular business meeting. A cordial invitation is extended to all women of the community.

Kenneth McCormick of Oregon City is visiting his brother-in-law, Peter Woelke, and attending school here. He is a real asset to the baseball team.

The teachers have 77 pupils in two rooms. Somewhat like the "Old Lady Who Lived in a Shoe." The school room are crowded and the playground not sufficient for so large a school, the children being compelled to play on the public road.

Mrs. Pickering of Jordan valley is spending the week with her daughter, Mrs. Williamson, and assisting in the care of her grandson, Willie, Jr.

The observance of the 25th anniversary of organization of the church has been postponed until April 23 on account of the county Sunday school convention and Easter.

Hazel Green expects to play a practice game of baseball with Brooks' team Friday afternoon if the weather is favorable.

SHARP CONTRAST MARKS FILM ROLE

Petite Fox Films Star Both Demure and Modern In "Publicity Madness"

"Publicity Madness," a hilarious satire on modern business produced by Fox Films with Edmund Lowe and Lois Moran co-starred in the featured roles, will open at the Capitol today.

According to all who have seen this production it is made up of five reels of laughs with delightful romance and a variety of thrills thrown in for good measure. The situations in which the grandiloquent hero finds himself are especially funny and the unusual ending of the business.

The story itself was adapted by Andrew Benison from an original tale by Anita Loos. It deals with a fresh, garrulous, soap salesman, whose ego is only surpassed by the daring of his advertising schemes. After being fired from one concern he worms his way into another old fashioned competitor, and from then on things begin to move swiftly and humorously.

The romance in the picture has to do with his love for the daughter of the president of the second concern, the thrills are connected with a record breaking flight to the Philippines which is part of his advertising scheme.

Edmund Lowe plays Pete King, the salesman and Lois Moran is Violet Henley. Others in the cast are Arthur Housman as a running representative of a credit clothing house, E. J. Ratcliffe as "Uncle Elmer Henly, old fashioned owner of the Henly Soap company, James Gordon, as his competitor, Byron Munson as Violet's other suitor and Norman Peck as Wilbur, the high bro office boy.

Albert Ray, who already has a long list of comedy successes to his credit directed the production.
