FARM VIEWS ASKED

WESTERN SCENES TO BE FILMED FOR GOVERNMENT

Scenic views of rural Oregon are being exhibited at rural meetings very little attention was paid to horticulture, and especially none whatever of the many things of interest in the Willamette valley.

The pictures of farm life, taken under the direction of the department of agriculture, were entirely views of farm life in the east. Distribution was through the Oregon Agricultural college.

The chamber of commerce wrote Senator Charles L. McNary, calling his attention to the oversight on the part of the department of agriculture in failing to distribute films of western farm life.

ber of commerce received the following telegram from Senator McNary:

"For several days the various heads of department of agriculture have been before my committee holding hearings on the annual agricultural appropriation bill and I called to their attention your statement that there should be more stereopticon views of western horticulture. I was assured that views would be taken of western horticulture including the Willamette valley. Thanks for your suggestion."

When Jack Dempsey lost the world's heavyweight championship to Gene Tunney in Philadelphia, on September 23, 1926, it marked the second time in the history of American boxing that a champion passed without being knocked out. The first time was in 1906 when Jim Jeffries, who retired because of a death of opponents, named Tommy Burns to succeed him as champion because he liked Burns, according to Charles J. McGuire in an article in Liberty Magazine.
