NEW YORK, Mar. 19-(AP)-Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh to night received the Woodrow Wilson award, consisting of a medal and $25,000 for "his services for the cause of international friendship" during his good will flight to Central and South America.

The presentation was made as a dinner of the Woodrow Wilson memorial foundation. Colone Lindbergh was the third recipient of the award which was given in 1924 to Viscount Cecil of Chel wood for his services to the League of Nations and in 1926 to Elihu Root for his part in the inception of the permanent court of international justice or "world court?'

John W. Davis, former ambassador to Great Britain, in an ad dress explained that Lindbergh was selected as a recipient of the lower house in the legislature for award, not as a victorious soldier nor as a successful diplomat of statesman nor as a noted poet of orator, but as a "mere individual" who had "the great fortune to serve peace in most effective Poulus Leaves for Europe ways.
