

THE SHOW-OFF COMING TO SALEM

Oregon Agricultural College Players To Present Interesting Play

The presentation of "The Show-Off," George Kelley's two acts of comedy drawn from American life, at the Capitol theater tonight will be the first appearance of Oregon State college dramatists in Salem. The characters in the play are taken by members of National Collegiate players, an organization of student dramatists who are particularly advanced along this line of work.

The comedy is built around the monumental ego of one, Aubrey Piper, who can see nothing but good in himself. "Caesar can do no wrong" is Aubrey Piper's motto and lives up to it clear through and including the final curtain. Henry Fitzpatrick takes the part of Aubrey. He displays a veteran ability to remain in character and in the presentation at the Majestic theater in Corvallis of the "Show-Off" he drew much favorable criticism.

Evelyn Jacobs plays the part of Mother Fisher in a manner quite conducive to hilarity. She reveals her versatility since she has taken the part of the young feminine leading character in some plays yet in this she masterfully handles the mother part.

The possibilities of a comparatively minor part to be worked into an outstanding interpretation is revealed by Ken Lowell, who plays Pop Fisher. He appears in the first act only yet his playing at the Corvallis performance led to many expressions of regret that he did not appear in the play of tenor.

One change only has been made in the cast since the Corvallis performance. Elynore Case will take the part of Aubrey Piper's sister-in-law which was formerly played by Marie Graham. Warren Rolph takes the part of her husband.

The other younger feminine roll is taken by Pauline Grauel—Amy, the wife of Aubrey Piper. She portrays well the transitional American girl—neither flapper nor extremely modest, yet typically present day American. She does not need to try to get into character since she is already there to begin.

Other characters include Hugh Wiley as Mr. Gill, workingman; Walter Wieman, the insurance man; John James, Joe, the inventive younger son.

Eleven persons will make the trip including the cast and director, D. Palmer Young, instructor in public speaking and dramatics.

The play which has been pronounced by many to be one of the most finished productions attempted at the college will be presented later on in Albany and possibly in Portland. The caliber of the acting is far above the average amateur work in the opinion of critics who have seen the players. Many of the players find work with professional companies steadily on graduation from Oregon state. Some of them work with professional companies during summer vacation.

LONDON QUARTET TO GIVE CONCERT

Latin America Said To Be At Low Ebb In Regard To Entertainments

Latin America is still at comparatively low ebb in regard to music is the opinion of the London String Quartet as expressed by James Levey, the first violinist of the organization, the finest in the world, which will play here on Thursday, March 22, at Elsinore. In 1923 the quartet made a tour of South America, giving forty-nine concerts in two months. The countries of South America, he said, had not been prosperous and the people were unable to pay the prices demanded by musical organizations.

"The people of South America," said Mr. Levey, "have not yet become a concert-going class and it is the novelty of the thing that appeals to them more than anything else. Of course big names will draw, but then big artists want big fees. The London String Quartet proved one of the novelties, and, in fact, was the only musical organization to really meet with great success down there. The fame of this quartet had been brought to the attention of the South Americans by the success we have enjoyed in Spain, rather than in England and America. The Spanish papers are read with as much zeal as the 'Prensa' or 'Nacion', and the people know far more about what is going on in Madrid and Barcelona than in London and New York. Of course that is because there is more racial sympathy yet it always seemed strange to us that they were so influenced by what the people at Spain did and thought. It was because we were so popular in South America and not because of our equally enormous success in London and New York. During our stay in South America," continued Mr. Levey, "we played in Buenos Aires, Montevideo, Rosario, Valparaiso, Santiago and some of the smaller cities. In every place the quartet played it was greeted with excellent audiences. I found that in Chile the people were extremely fond of chamber music and especially of the work of the more modern composers. I was really surprised at the manner in which the English composers were received. Their works were called for again and again. We were all sorry to leave Chile, for there were so many small cities requesting us to appear."

"BODY AND SOUL" CALLED GREAT FILM

Plenty of Thrills Found In Picture for Lovers of Winter Sports

A writer-fellow, known as Shakespeare, Bacon and other names and, recently, claimed by the Italians, once got off a nifty to the effect that roses, regardless of their hue, would cast off the same fragrance.

Gradually, as Milt Gross will have it, there is to be a point. The management, in all candor, concedes it had rather have a title other than "Body and Soul"—a Barrymore picture—which shows at the Elsinore Friday and Saturday.

But the defense has not yet made its point. "Body and Soul" would be just as great a film were it called by any other name.

Just as the great Eugene O'Neill is daring, so are the producers of "Body and Soul." There are those who will recall the success, "The Gamblers," offered as a legitimate production.

"The Gamblers," ignored precedent and billed but five characters. "Body and Soul" has gone further. It has but four persons in the cast. But these four comprise Lionel Barrymore, Alleen Pringle, Norman Kerry and Roy Barnes.

Any one of them would draw packed houses. The producers do not waste money. With their four stars, in one picture, they went the limit.

"Body and Soul" is a good picture, said V. E. McIntyre, manager.

It was, for him, a long speech.

There are plenty of thrills in "Body and Soul" for lovers of winter sports.

The book, from which the scenario was taken, was read by millions and was called "The Branding Iron."

Turk. Takes Out Salary In Historic Old Relics

PARIS (AP)—Selling historic treasures stolen from museums is getting to be difficult. Essad Nassouhi, formerly assistant curator of the Constantinople Museum of Antiquities, tried to pay himself his back salary by peddling a few little things he picked out of the cases there but he found his taste in antiques was too good.

A Hittite tablet, 3,000 years old, was sold for $700 to a Paris expert but at the Louvre Museum it was identified immediately as one of the oldest and rarest things of its kind. Essad Nassouhi was arrested and turned over other things he had taken.

Mustapha Kemal Pasha's new government, he said, paid him lots of compliments for his work—for he is reputed to be an eminent authority—but it didn't pay his salary and when his family got hungry he took some of the museum
