Banana War Still Rages

Yes, we have bananas: bunch after bunch of 'em. That might well be the cry of local food merchants, for, if you have noticed, for the past week now things have been happening in the banana world. Which is a long way of saying that there's no more peace on banana row; prices have been cut and slashed, till one can buy bananas, almost at his own price.

Good bananas, too, in most instances and not like the cheap ones in normal days. Not so many days ago, it was a real bargain to buy three pounds for one two-bit piece, thin or otherwise. Now, that same money will buy a whole dozen good grade ripe fruit. Some grocers are selling them at four pounds for—but for what's the use of trying to quote prices when they're apt to change for the better (if you're standing in front of the counter) before the paper's out. The shippers, of course, started the battle, and about all the merchant can do, is to fall in line. It's the "overflow" time of year for bananas, and the temporary cheapness is nothing unusual. Yes, we may all have bananas today.

Green Beans Coming Soon

Green beans will be upon the Salem market Monday morning, according to information from the local wholesalers.

The Texas crop is now rolling, and will be in reach here in time to greet the early Monday shopper, they predict.

No price has been quoted on this newest-appearing vegetable, and none will be until they are ready for distribution.

That Tired Feeling

Is it caused by overwork—either mental or physical—or is it due to a condition of the system known as "over-acidity"?

Scientists claim the latter cause to be largely responsible for lack of endurance, and emphasize the vital importance of maintaining the "Chemical Balance"—that margin by which alkali exceeds acid in the blood.

This natural tonic is Alkaline in action—neutralizes the acid and supplies mineral elements which are absolutely essential to health.
