Coolidge and Senator Mc-Nary At Odds Over Equalization Fee Clause

VETO KNIFE BRANDISHED

Passage of Measure Predicted by Sponsors Working in Upper House of Congress; Confer With President

WASHINGTON, Apr. 7 .- (AP) -President Coolidge and farm leaders in congress apparently are still at odds on farm relief and despite a significant conference today between the president and Senator McNary, author of the pending senate measure, those close to the White House believe another veto inevitable if the controversial equalization fee is re tained in the legislation.

However there were some today who believed Mr. Coolidge would give his approval to most of the other provisions of the pending legislation and, if he returned an other McNary-Haugen bill, he would do so with the suggestion that it be repassed without the equalization fee.

Passage of the pending agricul ture measure with the equalization fee is confidently predicted by its sponsors. Furthermore Senator McNary announced after the White House parley that he was "standing pat" on the bill' provision. What luck he had in his conversation with the president about the bill was not re for the Wilamette university law school is rapidly nearing the proportions set by the requirements for the standardization of the school. This week more than 1800 volumes from the library of the former Senator R. Williams were given to the law library by his grandson, R. C. Williams.

Senator Williams attended Wil lamette University, preparing himself to serve Oregon as an attorney and congressman, and has al ways been interested in seeing th school prosper. Another large collection recently added to the library as a gift of Merton De Long, a Willamette graduate and prominent attorney of Portland. Mr. De Long has also given Dean Hewitt, of the Willamette law school, a great deal of aid in the collection of other books for the library from Portland.
