TOOK ADVICE OF HER MOTHER

Praises Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Wetmore, Colo.—"When I was married 14 years ago I was in bad health for a couple of years and when I tried to do anything I would get tired and worn-out. I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and on all these years and have recommended it to hundreds of women. I have given birth to six children and have taken the Vegetable Compound as a tonic before child birth. It has done me worlds of good. My mother had taken it several times and she recommended it to me."—Mrs. JOHN BASSA, Wetmore, Colorado.

events of the entire year. The duet, "An Easter Alleluia" (Silver) was one of the most beautiful numbers of the entire program which opened with an organ prelude, "Jubilate Deo" played by Professor T. S. Roberts. The soprano and contralto voices of the singers were perfectly blended and completely balanced.

The thrilling number, "Awake, Put On Thy Strength, O Zion" (Matthews) was the first offering of the chorus. The full beauty of the Easter music was brought out by the fresh, clear, and youthful voices of the singers.

The soloists for the evening were Mrs. Treval Powers, contralto, who sang "Sheep and Lambs (Homer); Ronald Craven, tenor, who sang "Hossannah" (Granier); and Everett Craven, whose solo, "Gloria" was one of the most pleasing numbers of the entire program.

Schubert's appropriate song, "The Omnipotence" showed the careful training that the splendid chorus has received from its director. The incidental solo of this concluding program was sung by Mrs. Gilbert Wrenn (Kathleen LaRaut.)

Flyers Show Disregard For Regulation Costume

NEW YORK, Apr. 9.—(AP)—Clothes may make the man in some professions, but they don't make the flier.

There is regulation costume for fliers but apparently the fliers have not heard about it, and the men who go up in the air in goggles wear everything from derby hats to plus fours.

The old days of helmets and goggles and formal flying suits are fast following in the wake of the duster and scarf and goggle period and the early automobile period. The reason is the cabin type of plane which makes flying in a sense an "indoor sport." The regulation flier nowadays has about the same belittling smile for a person in sporting store flying regalia that a country boy has for the carefully dressed fisherman from the city or that the real cow puncher wears for the picture-show movie cowboy.

The average civilian flier today dresses much like the average bond salesman. He generally has goggles somewhere about him in case of need, but they are seldom to be seen on his eyes. He probably does not own a helmet and a regulation flying suit forms no portion of his wardrobe. He has no para chute.

With women fliers there is almost as much disregard of regulation attire as among the men.

The commercial fliers at the Long Island fields are as a whole indistinguishable sartorially from the visitors who stroll about or who pay for short rides. Many of them even wear starched white collars. There are, of course, a few comers, who show their contempt for dressiness by their flying togs. One man at Curtiss field and Thimble club Thursday afternoon in their home on Kingwood Heights.

The interesting program which had been arranged by Mrs. Max Gehlar and Mrs. George Trotter was followed by conversation and sewing. Refreshments were served at the tea hour.

Members present were Mrs. Max Gehlar, Mrs. Charles Hathaway, Mrs. L. F. Brown, Mrs. Charles Adams, Mrs. George Trotter, Mrs. Harold Cook, Mrs. Anna Pattison, Mrs. Charles Swartz, Mrs. George Van Santen, Mrs. Kruger, Mrs. Ray Lacey, Mrs. Hettie Simkins, Mrs. Elmer Cook, and the following junior members: Danny Adams, Georgia Rose Cook, Elvin Van Santen, and Helen May Cook.

The next meeting of the club will be held at the home of Mrs. Krueger.

invariably wears a battered derby when he flies, a pair of goggles snapped about the dusty crown. Another wears a straw hat in summer and winter, rain, shine or snow.

About the only colorful flier left at the eastern fields is Bert Acosta. His regular costume is tan breeches, gray windbreaker, polished riding boots, black helmet, and on occasions a brightly colored scarf.

The usual air costumes of other well known fliers follows: Commander Richard E. Byrd—navy uniform or business suit.

Clarence Chamberlin—gray knickerbocker and windbreaker on formal flights and threadbare business suit for short hops.

Charles A. Levine—business suit with sometimes a mechanic's jumper over it and a blue trench coat. Recently flew from Boston to New York in evening clothes.

Captain Rene Fonck—French army uniform, bemuddled coat which he doffs once in the air in favor of a blue sweater.

Brent Balchen—he believes in the flying motto of comfort first. Wears civilian clothes, no hat, moccasins and soft shirt.

Bert Hall—business suit. Doesn't own a helmet.

Wilmer Stultz—blue business suit and in winter lumberjack's boots and heavy blue sweater.

Eddie Stinson—civilian clothes and no hat.

Brook and Schlee—half way round the world in civilian clothes and without helmets.

WILBUR DEFENDS NAVAL EXPANSION

Building Program Declared Necessary In Speech Before Legion

OMAHA, Neb., April 9.—(AP)—In two speeches here today Secretary Wilbur defended the navy against thrusts of "organized propaganda" and maintained his contention of the need for an American naval building program.

He spoke tonight before the American Legion post, asserting that no reasonable man or nation can doubt America's sincere purpose to limit naval armament. Earlier in the day he told the chamber of commerce that "a peaceful, neutral" navy was as essential to the prosperity of every citizen because of its continuance of uninterrupted overseas commerce.

In the first address Mr. Wilbur attacked propagandists who he said were determining national defense, and he recalled that President Coolidge said in his last message to congress that "we would provide for our needs regardless of propagandists for or against an adequate navy."

Tonight, the secretary denied that the naval building program was provocative, adding that it certainly had not inspired Great Britain or Japan to increased construction.

"Great Britain," he said, "has declared to us her purpose to far exceed this program. Certainly not Japan, for she has already exceeded the 5-5-3 ratio, and both know of our sincere desire to limit naval armament."

MESSINGER BOY HURT

PORTLAND, Apr. 9.—(AP)—William Fardley, 25, messenger boy, was seriously injured today when a motorcycle he was riding collided with a street car at the east end of the Morrison street bridge. His skull was fractured. The accident was the fourteenth traffic mishap over Easter.
