An Old Recipe to Darken Hair—By JANICE RANDALL

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is messy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Neth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients, for only 75 cents. Everybody uses this preparation now, because no one can possibly do it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger.

EAST PORTLAND TOO QUIET; MOVES HERE
All This Happened In 1811, However; Etienne Lucier Early Settler

East Portland's first settler didn't like the solitude there, so he moved to French Prairie, near Champeog, according to a recent account written by Fred Lockley of the Oregon Journal in his column, "Impressions and Observations of the Journal Man." Material used by Mr. Lockley in this article was obtained while he was a member of The Oregon Statesman staff. It says in part: "The first settler on what is now East Portland was Etienne Lucier, who came to Oregon in 1811 with Captain Wilson P. Hunt. Lucier was a free trapper for some years. He then went to work for Dr. McLoughlin. Just 100 years ago this year he decided to give up trapping and go to farming. He took up a place just across the river from what was then known as 'The Clearing,' but is now known as Portland. 'The Clearing,' on the river bank, was about midway between Vancouver and Oregon City. Mr. Lucier built a cabin near what is now the corner of Union avenue and East Morrison street. He cut a trail down to the river bank, which later became the landing for the first ferry between Portland and East Portland, at the foot of East Morrison street.

Mr. Lucier became lonely for neighbors, so in 1829 he moved to French Prairie, taking up a place two miles above Champeog. Donald Manson, a Hudson's Bay employe, married his daughter, Felicité, in 1828. In 1839 and '40 he worked for the Oregon Statesman and traveled on the Hocklaim pretty well all over the Willamette valley and the Coast country. I stopped overnight at the farm homes of the pioneer settlers and right there and then I acquired my taste for digging up the facts about Oregon's early days. On my first trip I stopped overnight at the home of F. X. Mathieu, who told me of his old neighbor and fellow-countryman, Etienne Lucier. I visited St. Paul, St. Louis, Champeog, Gervais, McKay settlement and other old-time places on French prairie and talked with the old settlers.

After Lucier had abandoned his claim to East Portland it was taken up by another French-Canadian, named Portier. When Portier died Dr. McLoughlin became his administrator and in 1845 A. L. Lovejoy sold the claim at administrator's sale. Colonel J. N. Nesmith, who was judge of probate, attended the sale with the intention of buying the claim, but when he found that "Uncle Jimmy" Stephens wanted to start a cooper shop and desired to purchase the claim because of the fine quality of timber on it, from which he could make his barrels and casks, Colonel Nesmith did not bid against him. Later, when the donation land law came into effect, "Uncle Jimmy" Stephens proved up on his claim, taking 640 acres, on which East Portland was later built. Uncle Jimmy had originally been considering buying the claim on the west side of the river, where Portland now stands. Overton, who had taken it up in 1843, offered to sell him the claim for $200, but he would not take the price of the claim out in casks or barrels, and as Uncle Jimmy had no cash, he was unable to buy the Overton claim. Overton sold 320 acres of it to A. L. Lovejoy, and in 1845 sold the other half to Francis W. Pettigrove. Lovejoy disposed of his half in 1845 to Benjamin Stark and three years later Pettigrove sold his half of the claim to Daniel H. Lowndale, taking his pay in leather.

Leftover Bread Used—The old saying about there being "plenty and to spare" was literally true concerning the big banquet given Monday night by the American Legion in honor of its chief. In fact, so much was there to spare that the local Salvation Army was called on the job early Tuesday morning and asked to distribute some 60 to 75 large loaves of bread, besides a giant cake, among its poor families. In less than an hour the bread and cake was in the homes of six large families where a mere baker's loaf is hardly able to make the rounds at meal time. The cake was one of the largest ever baked. Thus did Mr. Spafford's visit to Salem cause considerable bread to be "cast upon the waters."

Skating Party Next—The secret which the senior high school chapter of commerce has been holding up its sleeve for a week or more came out at a student assembly yesterday morning. It is no less than a skating party which the commercial group is sponsoring for the entire high school Saturday evening. John Verdieck, president of the chapter, extended the invitation to the student body yesterday. A clever stunt, in which several girls did some skate antics, "sold" the idea to the students. The skating

COLEMAN SPEAKER
COLLEGE HEAD LAUDS CHRISTIANITY IN BUSINESS
Christian principles can be applied successfully in everyday business and are applied by some business men although not as extensively as they might be, President Norman F. Coleman of Reed college, Portland, declared last night in an address before the Jason Lee Brotherhood banquet in Jason Lee church.

Man should be placed on a level higher than mere money interest, he asserted.

A program given last night included two musical numbers by Miss Edith Findley and reading "Good Fellows," and "The Courtship of Miles Standish" by A. W. Bunn.

There were about 50 men present at the banquet. Al Cummings, head of the organization, presided.
